Port Angeles Luring Shoppers

A chance to chase Christmas bargains in Port Angeles is offered Victoria shoppers at excursion rates.

Two Port Angles hotels — just 90 minutes from Victoria — are advertising three-day, two-night holiday packages for $33 each, double occupancy, in a promotion sponsored by that city's Downtown Merchants Association.

Shoppers from here can expect to save at least six per cent on food items and substantially more on clothing and durable items.

Jack Rabourn, manager of Aggie's Inn, said the offer is good for any three consecutive days including weekends. His hotel includes dinners on two nights and continental breakfast two mornings in a deluxe room.

The Royal Victorian and Harrington's Town House makes a similar offer, and both hotels provide courtesy transportation from the ferry terminal.

Not long ago the trend was in the opposite direction, when Port Angles residents came to Victoria to do their serious shopping.

"We used to do a lot of shopping in Vancouver and Victoria, but prices have got to be rather out of hand," Rabourn said.

Recently he attended a convention in Vancouver. "I was looking at men's clothing and I was appalled at the prices," he said. Suits and sport coats were $20 to $100 higher than at home.

Americans used to seek British woollens in Victoria, imported in great quantity and variety by both department stores and specialty shops.

But now the same items can be bought for cheaper in even smaller centres like Port Angeles, than in B.C.

★ $ Fall To Hike Food

Prices for many food commodities should increase and the decline in prices of others should stop in the next few weeks because of the sudden drop in value of the Canadian dollar, British Columbia farm leaders said Tuesday.

Commodities most affected will be chicken meat, pork, fruit and vegetables.

Provincial agriculture ministry spokesmen and farmers attending the annual meeting of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture in Richmond welcomed the six-cent drop in value, saying it will mean a large cutback of many United States food imports which have flooded the Canadian market for the last eight months.

In Victoria, the B.C. branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada said in a brief to Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair Tuesday that higher food markups and lower family incomes are making life onerous for B.C. consumers. The consumers asked Mair to set up a task force of deputy ministers to initiate, co-ordinate and review food policy in B.C. Story on Page 37.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said in Richmond that consumers should not be upset because farmers "have shown by the consumer price index they have been carrying a greater load of the anti-inflation measures."

"They (consumers) should be prepared to support people in their own province and spend their money where they earn it and not sending it to other countries."

Health Minister Bob McClelland has returned from studying the methods used in Japan for treatment of heroin addicts. He says he is keeping an open mind about whether changes are needed in the B.C. system. See story on Page 3.

$ RECOVERING

The Canadian dollar recovered slightly today in international trading, reaching 96.57 cents U.S. at noon, compared with a low of 96.49 at closing Tuesday.

A foreign exchange trader in Montreal said trading seemed to be slowing down.

"It's not as hectic as it has been the last few days," the Royal Bank trader said. (MPs quiz dollar decline, see P.49.)

LUMBER COMMUNITIES ALARMED

Layoffs for 12,000

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

British Columbia's major forest companies will lay off more than 12,000 employees this month.

Of the total, at least 5,800 are loggers, 5,400 are pulp and paper workers, 580 work in sawmills while another 500 are in linerboard and other mills.

In the case of loggers, layoffs are normal over Christmas but some communities are alarmed by what shapes up as a five-week closure.

Hardest hit is Port Alberni where almost 3,000 men will be laid off by MacMillan Bloedel.

The company will lay off 1,473 Port Alberni loggers Friday and will close the pulp mill for two weeks starting Dec. 22, laying off another 1,300 employees.

Another 100 men have been laid off indefinitely at the Port Alberni plywood mill.

One manager said he expects a severe slump in sales in January but traditional Christmas spending will likely be heavy, despite the cutoff of wages for the five-week period.

A spokesman for MacMillan Bloedel said loggers should be back at work in January if weather conditions permit.

Jack Munro, western regional vice president of the International Woodworkers of America, said the companies are not managing their operations effectively and appear not to care about their workers.

He said the companies complain about a lack of productivity, but if employees had increased their productivity, the layoffs probably would have come two months ago.

NDP forest policy critic Bill King said the layoffs demonstrate the need to decentralize the forest industry, as recommended in the Pearse report.

King said large companies regularly lay off loggers during the winter while smaller companies continue to maintain full employment.

The layoffs affect most Vancouver Island communities.

Victoria escapes any immediate layoffs in the city limits but loggers and mill employees in the district are affected.

British Columbia Forest Products will be closing its pulp and paper operations at Crofton for two weeks starting Dec. 24. The company said most of the 1,050 employees would take the times as holidays to avoid losing pay.

In Victoria, BCFP mill manager Jim Warr said the company has no plans to reduce its present staff level of 850 employees.

"Our staff total has been remarkably stable all year and we are hopeful this will continue through the winter."

The only closure in sawmill operations to date is a layoff of two shifts by MacMillan Bloedel at Harmac, near Nanaimo, putting 580 men out of work from Dec. 22 to Jan. 3.

The closure is set to coincide with a shutdown of the Harmac pulp mill putting 850 off the job for the same period.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. said it will be laying off 1,000 loggers and 550 pulp workers for an extended Christmas break.

British Columbia Forest Products is laying off 800 loggers.

Company spokesman said the logging layoff is normal practice at this time of year, although it does not normally last beyond two weeks.

But the pulp and paper

JUDGE FIGHTS PRISONER

SASKATOON (CP) — A judge fought off a 19-year-old prisoner who attacked him waving a knife in court Tuesday.

"I don't know what the man's intentions were, whether he wanted to take me as a hostage or what, but I grabbed the arm with the knife and simply tried to hold him away. I knew help wouldn't be far away," Judge R. N. Conroy said in an interview.

Saskatoon police said the defendant rushed up to the judge and waved a knife in his face threateningly

"The judge grabbed his arm and pushed him away. When the prisoner realized his action wasn't going to get him anywhere he tried to escape from the court," a police spokesman said.

Friday Meeting Could Mean Christmas Postal Strike

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers meets Friday to decide whether to snarl Canada's heavy pre-Christmas mail flow with a new round of walkouts.

CUPW president Joe Davidson scheduled the meeting of top union officials after the collapse of mediation efforts to resolve chronically festering problems stemming from automation changes in the postal system.

(Postal officials in Victoria have advised that the Christmas mail rush has already started and appealed to the public to try to avoid using the post office on Mondays, which are particularly heavy days. See story page 9.)

"The Canadian public will probably know what we intend to do then (Friday) — whether or not we'll hold a national strike, or start rotating strikes or we might not strike at all," Davidson told a news conference today. "It's up to the board of diretors."

"The mediator quit," said Davidson. "So we are back at square one."

He appealed to the public "to put the blame where it really belongs—the employer."

Davidson said the union leaders could not call a national strike without holding a country-wide vote. However, CUPW executives had authority to call rotating strikes without holding such a vote.

Mediator Dr. Noel Hall cancelled further talks between the CUPW and government negotiators late Tuesday after deciding he could not bring the two sides to settlement.

Davidson accused the government of failing to live up to terms of a settlement on the automation issue reached Dec. 2, 1975, which ended a 42-day strike by the postal workers. The CUPW has said changes have been introduced without regard to agreed—to procedures in the intervening time.

"It will take till kingdom come to settle the 5,000 grievances we now have before the government," Davidson said.

In a statement, CUPW vice-president Jean-Claude Parrot said "the continuing refusal of employer representatives to accept the requirements of the collective agreement, especially article 29 on technological change, have caused the failure of Dr. Hall's efforts to mediate this dispute."

Food War With U.S.?

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada could be waging a war of aggression against the United States within the lifetime of most of the present population, according to Dr. Iben Browning of Albuquerque, New Mexico.

He is convinced changes in climate are coming that will ruin Canada's fragile food growing capability.

When people get short of food and their children are starving they are not interested in compromising," Browning, a physiologist, said in a telephone interview from his home.

"History shows repeated examples of people migrating when food supplies grow short," he added.

In the thirteenth century, he asserted, the Mongols, never more than a million strong, conquered all of Asiatic and European Russia to find food for themselves and their livestock.

The same thing could happen with Canadians.

In the next 50 or 60 years drought and increasing cold will menace this country's food growing region.

And these factors could turn a peaceable nation into a band of agressors seeking land from their southern neighbors.

Browning admits his projected scenario isn't based on hard facts, but on an analysis of history drawn from his study of the world's changing climate.

We may think we can control climate, Browning said, but that is a myth.

"We don't control our environment at all, it controls us. Climate pushes mankind around."

"The whole world is going to be short of food," Browning warned. But the countries that will be among the hardest are those in the northern hemisphere — Canada, Britain, Germany, France.

Browning's gloomy forecasts are based on what he sees as the coming together of three separate climatic cycles. By themselves they can be upsetting.

But, piled one atop the other, they could be catastrophic.

First, is a 179-year cycle of tidal activity that affects the earth's crust. This phenomenon is releasing pent-up energy causing earthquakes and volcanoes.

This means a lot of dust and debris is being stirred up that filters into our atmosphere, blocking out sunlight.

147 USC Projects Stress Self-Help

Not just help—self help.

That's the emphasis this year in programs sponsored by the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, 147 projects on three continents.

The USC has pioneered countless self-help projects over its 31-year history because it believes implicitly in the principle of people working out their own destiny in their own culturally-oriented ways, says executive director Dr. Lotto Hitschmanova.

Great thinks can come from small investments, she says. In Lesotho, for example, the donation of a building together with egg-grading equipment has enabled local women to establish a grass roots egg marketing organization designed to control the price and distribution of eggs between rural and urban centres.

Then in Botswana a project to grow eucalyptus trees has met with great success and could help cut back timber imports from South Africa.

In other countries, a few tools supplied by the generosity of Canadians through the USC, a piece of industrial equipment or a simple irrigation device have given thousands the means to make a modest livelihood and break out of the cycle of poverty.

The USC is a non-governmental, non-political, non-denominational, non-racial voluntary agency which continues to bring a helping hand to the poor and disadvantaged around the world each year because enough Canadians believe charity can't afford to stay at home.

Last year the people of Greater Victoria contributed $23,920 to the local USC appeal sponsored by the Victoria Times. This year they are being asked to give $30,000 and with the campaign just under way, the total given so far stands about $2,500.

Donations can be mailed in care of the Victoria Times, P.O. Box 300, Victoria, brought to the business office counter at 2621 Douglas St. or will be accepted by any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Cheques should be made payable to the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

BIRDS BRING DISEASE

A shipment of pet birds which arrived in Victoria earlier this year is suspected of bringing a rare but potentially severe pneumonia-like disease called psittacosis or ornithosis.

Dr. Brian Allen, deputy regional health officer, said today seven or eight people have come down with a desease thought to be the kind sometimes carried by birds.

While it is severe, it is rarely fatal and can be treated in hospital with antibiotics. All local cases are recovering satisfactorily.

The disease has not been positively identified in either the birds or people, he said. Laboratory testing in Vancouver is continuing.

The birds under suspicion are members of the parrot family. But people who have pet budgies, parrots, parakeets or the like should not be alarmed, said Dr. Allen, because it is highly unlikely the disease, even if confirmed, could have spread from the suspected birds.

Dr. Allen said the suspected cases have involved people who handled, distributed, bought or were otherwise associated with a shipment of birds to a local pet store which he declined to identify.

The birds might have the disease or just be carriers of it.

About two dozen birds are being held in quarantine. The threat of the disease led local bird fanciers to cancel a meeting.

Pub Liquor Dispenser 'Snow Job' Charged

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

A spokesman for the B.C. Hotels Association charged today liquor dispensing equipment companies have "done a snow job" on some hotels.

Louis Valente, past president of the association, was referring to reports that some hotels have installed the equipment in their beer parlors in anticipation of new liquor regulations.

He said the dispensing companies have been "spreading the word" since October that the new regulations will allow the sale of liquor in pubs.

The long-awaited changes to B.C. liquor laws were expected to be announced this afternoon.

Valente said he was "never more disturbed in his life" than he is about reports that the hotels are installing the new equipment.

"We never, never, never at any time were given any tip that we would be allowed liquor in pubs," he said.

"These guys got sold a bill of goods by the liquor dispensing equipment companies."

He would not name the companies involved but the owner of one of the largest firms today denied the charge.

Bob Norbert, president and owner of B and M. Distributing Ltd. in Vancouver, said there is no way his company is out to push new equipment for beer parlors.

He said there is not one hotel in the province that has installed new automated liquor dispensing equipment just for possible use in its beer parlor.

Some hotels, like the Ingraham in Victoria, have had equipment installed because it saves them money on existing operations, he said, adding it is possible the equipment could be adapted to serve a beer parlor if the liquor laws are changed.

He said many hotels in B.C. are in a precarious financial position and need to be able to sell liquor in the pubs in order to compete with other liquor outlets.

"There is no way we want to do anything to jeopardize the hotel industry," he said.

Norberg explained that people in the hotel industry are concerned that reports of hotels installing equipment in their pubs might lead the government to shy away from recommended changes in the laws.

He blamed the media for "sloppy reporting" and giving the impression that the new equipment is being installed purely for use in the beer parlors.

He said the equipment companies have heard a lot of rumors about upcoming changes but haven't instigated them to boost sales.

In the case of the Ingraham, he added, the equipment was put in this week primarily to increase the hotel's profit from the sale of liquor in its cabaret.

A spokesman at the Ingraham said the new equipment could cost about $9,000.

Valente said B.C. is the only province in Canada that doesn't allow the sale of liquor in pubs.

He said the B.C. hotels are "hurting" and desperately need to be able to sell liquor in the pubs in order to compete with dining lounges, discos and cocktail lounges.

MP Committee to Study Polysar

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons agreed Tuesday to refer to committee for detailed study charges that the giant government-owned Polysar company helped its European buyers duck taxes and currency regulations through a rebate system based on numbered Swiss bank accounts.

The move followed assurances by Prime Minister Trudeau that the company — once called Polymer Corp. Ltd. — used no bribes, kickbacks or shady accounting procedures in 1972 dealings with European customers.

New Democratic Party MPs brought on the study with accusations that Trudeau failed to stop Polysar, then Polymer, from billing its foreign buyers at inflated prices in order to remit the differences through numbered accounts after he was informed of the practice in March, 1973, by then auditor-general Maxwell Henderson.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent argued that the prime minister should have taken steps to stop any inappropriate payments. Instead, Trudeau referred the matter to former treasury board president Bud Drury who, after getting an explanation from the company, dropped the issue.

Drury told reporters Tuesday he was "quite certain" the matter would come up before the public accounts committee and said he felt no conflict of interest as a member of the committee and possibly one of its witnesses.

Trudeau defended his actions by saying Henderson should have raised the issue again if he was not satisfied with the government response.

But T. C. Douglas (NDP — Cowichan - the - Islands) said Henderson had no opportunity to bring the subject up because he was replaced in his post shortly after he wrote to Trudeau about the rebate system in 1973.

Last week, Mr. Trudeau tabled the 1973 letter from Henderson which said the company paid nearly $2 million in rebates to foreign customers in cash or by depositing the money in numbered Swiss accounts.

"As a result of this practice, the customer is in a position to reduce his tax liabilities in his own country and avoid his country's foreign exchange regulations," the letter said.

Tuesday, Trudeau said the government would take "strong action" against any government-owned firm that uses bribes or other illegal measures to beef up business.

But he said past business dealings by Polysars predecessor, Polymer, appear to be legal and in line with normal business practices.

If, for "ethical reasons," a decison was made to dispense with normal business rules, the government may be forced to question its participation in any company, he said.

Also in the Commons Tuesday, senior public servant Gerald Stoner's appointment as a member of a royal commission into financial management was challenged on grounds he is also involved in another, perhaps conflicting, investigation.

But Stoner emphatically denied in an interview that there is any conflict between his commission appointment and a government investigation into charges that the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce made an illegal loan of $2 million to Rhodesia.

Stoner, now deputy minister of industry, trade and commerce, also said that if there are any further published insinuations about his appointment, he will sue for libel.

Meanwhile, Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell is willing to go to Tel Aviv to audit the books of an agent involved in the sale of nuclear reactors to Korea and Argentina — but wants assurances there will be no restrictions.

FOOD WAR PREDICTED

Just that can make the world cooler and shorten the growing season.

University of Manitoba research shows that beginning 178 years ago for at least 20 years the ice in rivers draining into James Bay broke up 20 days later than "normal" in the spring, Browning claimed.

Second, is solar activity cycle that ebbs and rises on a cycle of 178 years.

Sun spots are one symptom of solar activity.

When it is high there is a corresponding increase in ultra violet light. Ultra violet rays produce ozone.

The denser the ozone layer, the warmer the earth temperature.

When solar activity decreases so does the production of ozone and the earth gets cooler.

Browning relates these cycles to historical events, something that generally doesn't sit well with the vast majority of scientists.

For instance, he pointed out that 178 years ago the Napoleonic Wars swept Europe.

And 178 years before that the 30 Years War was devastating the continent.

And it was in that period when people were abandoning Europe and seeking homes in the New World.

A third cycle is also peaking concurrently with the first two.

Incidentally, Browning and Winkless predicted Britain would be hit by a severe drought in 1975.

They were out by 12 months, it happened this summer.

"There are lots of qualified people," he told reporters. "But there are not too many of them who are eager. Actually, the job is very rewarding if you are masochistic, puritanical and a patriot."

Pork, Fruit Rising

uty minister of agriculture, said the chief competitive factor for vegetables, fruit and chicken meat this year has been U.S. products entering Canada at about four cents a pound under Canadian prices because the U.S. dollar was 98 cents to $1.02 and $1.04 Canadian.

"The imports pushed the prices down here and our people were in a position of having to find four cents somewhere and most had to absorb red ink," he said.

In the case of chicken meat, both Canadian and U.S. broiler producers have been losing money this year because of oversupply.

King said broiler production is up 15 per cent in the U.S. and close to 12 per cent in Canada this year. The different value in the U.S. dollar has allowed U.S. chickens to pour into Canada.

He said that the producer price of broilers in this province has not changed for more than a year and for the past four months, producers have been losing almost four cents a pound.

In the case of vegetables, particularly potatoes, most of the damage has already been done, said Larry Jorgenson, manager of the B.C. Coast vegetable marketing board.

U.S. potatoes have been coming in at about $3.50 a hundredweight, $3 lower than B.C. production costs, mainly because of U.S. oversupply and the higher value of the Canadian dollar, he said.

Bob Blair, chairman of the B.C. Egg Marketing Board, said the drop in Canadian dollar plus the U.S. food sales tax of five percent means eggs in Canada will be about three to four cents a dozen less than in the U.S.

Farmers at the meeting also predicted that the dollar change will have a dramatic effect on consumer shopping in U.S. border centres, estimated at more than $1.5 million a week for both food and non-food items.

layoffs are unusual. One company spokesman said customers stocked up on newsprint in anticipation of a price increase that took effect July 1 and are still using this backlog of paper.

As a result, stocks of newsprint are growing at B.C. plants and the closure will provide time for orders to pick up. Some mills normally close for a few days at Christmas but a two-week break is unusual.

Some forest industry spokesmen expressed surprise at the sawmill closure at Harmac. Most companies said they hope to keep sawmills operating throughout the winter.

11 mills have a large supply of logs and they could keep going for several months as long as orders continue at the present rate.

The logging layoff by MacMillan Bloedel starting Friday will affect a large number of coastal communities.

The layoffs include 380 at Chemainus, 390 at Kelsey Bay, 250 at Menzies Bay, 210 at Port McNeill, 100 at Shawnigan, 120 at Squamish, 75 at Powell River and 310 in the Queen Charlottes.

the weather

The ridge of high pressure remains nearly stationary over southern B.C. giving variable conditions with extensive fog near some coastal areas. However, a weak disturbance approaching the north coast is causing some precipitation over northern coastal districts. A few showers will accompany this system as it passes southeast over the province with a few showers of wet snow expected as it crosses the Interior, reaching southeastern B.C. on Thursday. Clearing will follow in its wake except over the southeast where a few snowflurries will persist.

Anglican Church Ordains Five Women

Canadian Press

Despite controversy and opposition, five women were ordained Tuesday to become the first women priests in the Anglican Church of Canada.

The general assembly of the Anglican Church approved the ordination of women priests last year but gave bishops the right to refuse ordination of women into their dioceses.

In a Vancouver ceremony, Rev. James Penrice, rector of St. David's Parish in Vancouver, protested the ordination of Elspeth Alley and Virginia Woods Briant, saying women priests are a "sponge" to the women's liberation movement.

In Prince George, B.C., Rev. F. Pat Reed was also to be ordained into the diocese of Caribou.

Earlier, Rev. Mary Louise Lucas and Rev. Beverley Joan Shanley, both of St. Catharines, Ont., were ordained at a hometown Church. Rev. Mary Alice Maud Mills of Kirkton, Ont., was ordained in London, Ont.

The Vancouver service, which attracted about 1,000 people, proceeded without incident until Archbishop David Somerville, reading from the service in the Anglican Book of Common Prayer, asked, "If there be any of you who knoweth any impediment or notable crime in any of them (the candidates)" to come forward.

Penrice read a petition objecting to the ordination of the women, who, he said, "by nature and by biology" did not qualify for ordination.

He said the ordination threatened "the unity of the church," especially reunification moves with Orthodox, Roman Catholic, Old Catholic and various Pentecostal denominations.

He also said the decision to ordain women was not within the competence of the church's General Synod, but is an issue "that must be decided by the whole church."

"This sponge to women's lib may in fact harm the high position which women should hold in the family and in the church," he said, adding that he "personally has no disrespect" for the two women involved in the ceremony.

Archbishop Somerville replied that "due process had been observed and both the General Synod and the House of Bishops had set their approval on this action."

The archbishop also noted that the General Synod had passed a "conscience clause" assuring male priests who object to the ordination of women that they will suffer no professional penalty for their views.

Mattress Offer Cited in Charge

KELOWNA — A false advertising charge against Bennett Stores to be heard here Feb. 7 stems from a claim concerning a mattress and spring, according to Digby Kier, prosecuting counsel.

In an advertisement last January, the store said that a brand-name mattress and spring were on sale for $138.88 and $228.88 when in fact it was a lesser-quality product that was being sold at those prices, Kier said.

The charge was laid by the federal consumer afairs department.

HACKED TO DEATH

LANARK, Scotland (Reuter) — Two prisoners from a top security mental hospital killed a male nurse and another prisoner and hacked a village policeman to death Tuesday while escaping.

The two, who had been certified criminally insane after facing charges of attempted murder, were arrested later following a three-hour car chase to the English border from Carstairs Hospital, near this central Scottish town.

The men—Thomas McCulloch, 27, and Robert Mone, 26—let themselves out of the heavily guarded hospital using keys they took after killing the male nurse.

Armed with an axe and a knife, they killed a fellow prisoner, Iain Simpson.

The policeman, Constable George Taylor, was on his way to the hospital when he was attacked and his van taken. A government spokesman said Tuesday: "When Constable Taylor got out they just chopped him to death."

As hundreds of armed police across southern Scotland hunted the escapees, they left the van and stole a car from a farm house.

A police car caught up with the fugitives and rammed their car as it sped across the border into England.

McClelland's Mind 'Open' On Japan Heroin Policy

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Health Minister Bob McClelland says he is keeping an open mind on whether the Japanese method of treating heroin addicts should be tried in B.C.

McClelland said in an interview Tuesday he is enthused and impressed by what the Japanese have achieved but has come to no conclusion as to the suitability of the method for western society.

McClelland and Bert Hoskins, chairman of the Alcohol and Drug Commission, spent three days last week in Japan examining the treatment program which has caught worldwide attention.

The Japanese claim that over a 10-year period they have virutally wiped out heroin addiction. The method involves a forced withdrawal from the drug in a hospital-like setting and extensive after-care and counselling for addicts.

"There is no doubt they have been extremely successful, probably more sucessful than anyone else in the world," McClelland said.

However, he said, before proposing a similar model for B.C., he wants to know the ramifications and consequences.

McClelland said he left Japan with a "mountain of information" that he is just beginning to sift through.

"We went there hoping to find some answers but ended up with more questions," he said.

He said the cost of providing the program and differences in attitude and addict life style might preclude its success here.

He noted that at the peak of the problem in Japan the number of addicts was estimated at about 40,000.

On the basis of population the problem in B.C. is a six times more serious, he said with 10,000 addicts in Vancouver alone.

He also noted addicts in Japan are not as attracted to the criminal element as they are here.

McClelland said he had numerous meetings with Japanese health and welfare officials and toured one major facility — a 100 bed section of a 500-bed mental hospital in Tokyo — reserved for the treatment of addicts.

Ironically there were no heroin addicts undergoing treatment at the time although there were some persons receiving treatment for addiction to other kinds of drugs.

He described the facilities as spartan and added "in terms of what we are used to, substandard."

"But in terms of care they are first class. Everyone we saw seemed very happy with the way things were going."

He refuted the popular concept that the Japanese method is a hardline approach.

"It's anything but hardline," he said. "I would call it very humane with the major thrust directed towards follow-up and care."

Addicts in Japan are placed on a mandatory five-year term of probation under the watch ful eyes of police and social workers but McClelland said he ran into instances in Tokyo where the care and counselling was being kontinued after 10 years.

The advisory council of the ADC is currently exploring alternate treatment programs for heroin addicts and McClelland said he hopes to have a proposal before the government early in the new year.

"We're keeping our minds open . . . and our options too," he said.

The minister said he had hoped on his trip to visit Hong Kong to discuss with officials the heroin distribution problems but time did not permit this Early last month B.C. Medical Association president Dr. Bill Jory lamented that a medical authority had not been invited to accompany McClelland.

Because of that, Jory said, the association can not feel itself bound by any recommendations proposed by McClelland.

Welfare Staff Jobs Cut

VANCOUVER (CP) — Top social welfare staff in seven Vancouver-area municipalities might be out of work Jan. 1 as a result of the provincial government taking over welfare responsibilities.

The government is negotiating retiring of welfare workers.

The non-union workers, however, 11 departmental administrators and assistants, will have to make bids on their jobs which will be posted.

If they win the job contests, they will take wage cuts up to $12,000 a year. Supervisors under the government are paid $21,000 a year.

Home Rule Bill For Scotland

Times News Services

LONDON — The British government Tuesday took a historic step toward giving Scotland and Wales a measure of self-government by publication of a bill to provide new powers for the ancient kngdoms.

Debate over the legislation will dominate Parliament for the next year.

The government's model walks a narrow tightrope between those demanding separate, sovereign states and traditionalists who oppose any weakening of the United Kingdom.

In effect, the bill would create a federal Britain with limited home rule for Scotland and Wales.

Before the debate in Parliament is over, the measure could split an already divided Labor Party and drive Prime Minister James Callaghan from office.

His best hope for survival lies in the fact that opposition Conservatives are as badly fissured as Labor over the bill.

In any event, Callaghan had no choice but to introduce the measure. The demand to do something has been too strong.

The Scottish Nationalist party, with 11 seats in Parliament now, is the fastest growing organization in the province and it insists on a separate state.

Some political observers here said the bill has only a 50-50 chance of passing.

It now seems likely the government will reverse course and also permit referendums in Scotland and Wales for the people to pass judgment if and when the bill is passed in and when the bill is passed in Parliament.

The Scottish Nationalist party, which sees this measure of devolution as a step toward separatism, charged that the bill does not go far enough, particularly as it does not propose tax-raising powers for the Edinburgh assembly.

The Nationalists also say Scotland should get a special share of North Sea oil wealth — which the government has rejected.

Only the Labor party in Scotland reacted favorably to the plan, declaring it would halt the separatist policies of the Nationalists.

Spokesmen for Scottish conservatives said the proposals would be costly and cause conflict, and the liberals judged them unnecessarily complicated.

The recently launched Scotland Is British compaign said the plan invited failure on every score and did nothing toward alleviating Scotland's diffeculties.

In Wales, devolutionists are eager for a referendum, confident the people would approve the plan for an assembly in Cardiff.

Opponents feel the vote would go the other way and see it as their last hope of killing the question.

Plaid Cymru, the Welsh nationalist party, said the bill represents "the bare minimum" of requirements and was inadequate because it gave no law-making powers. It called for parity with Scotland.

An open letter to ticket buyers of the Provincial and the Western Express.

WESTERN CANADA LOTTERY FOUNDATION

The purpose of this letter is to make it very clear that the policy of the Western Canada Lottery Foundation in respect to both the Western EXPRESS Lottery and the PROVINCIAL Lottery has always been to pay out all unclaimed prizes as bonus prizes in future draws. Under no circumstances does the prize money of the $1 EXPRESS or the $5 PROVINCIAL ever return as revenue to the Foundation or its participating member provinces.

IT REMAINS AS PRIZE MONEY UNTIL DISTRIBUTED TO WINNERS.

This applies to all unclaimed prize money, whether it results from the failure of a winner, for whatever reasons, to claim his prize, or is due to the possibility that the prize winning ticket in question was not sold.

(1) Bonus draws are instituted in the Western EXPRESS from time to time to reduce the portion of the prize fund that has not been awarded to the public.

(2) In the PROVINCIAL, the different game design and longer selling period make it possible for determining prior to the next draw if any unsold tickets (returned at the close of sales just prior to the draw) were eligible to win major prizes. If they were, those prizes are added to the next draw as bonus prizes.

The principle of returning to the buying public the dedicated prize monies is always maintained. Simply put, all the prize money in the EXPRESS and PROVINCIAL will be awarded at the time of the draw, or in subsequent draws as bonuses.

In the last PROVINCIAL draw (October 31, 1976) two tickets bearing grand prize winning numbers (one for $1 million and one for $250,000) were found to be among the tickets returned. Both of these prizes will be added to the next PROVINCIAL draw on December 31, as special prizes. They will be awarded by drawing two additional bonus numbers.

THE WESTERN CANADA LOTTERY FOUNDATION

P.S. This means that there will be six chances at $250,000 and six chances at $1 million in the next PROVINCIAL Lottery Draw in Vancouver on New Years Eve, December 31st.

The Dollar Weakens

The precipitous decline of the Canadian dollar this week is not surprising in the wake of the Quebec election and the devaluation of other currencies. Currency traders were bound to take a closer look at the Canadian monetary unit following the devaluation of Australian, New Zealand and Mexican currencies. In essence, the dollar has been overvalued for some time and an orderly decline should promote exports abroad and make Canada more competitive on international markets. For example the British Columbia forest industry estimates that each one cent drop in the dollar represents $23 million extra in gross sales annually.

But there are dangers in a sudden currency drop too. Wage and price controls further complicated with heavy borrowings in the U.S. by corporations and governments, have given us a false picture of Canada's economic health compared with that of the U.S. Heavy borrowing abroad, it should be said, is aided and abetted by the Bank of Canada's high domestic interest rate policy, a policy that is increasingly looking short-sighted and too rigid. While economic production grew at an annual rate of 3.2 per cent in the third quarter of this year and inflation slowed to a nine per cent annual average, the economy has been disappointing, even using cautious government yardsticks.

At this delicate time in Canada's political and economic history, a 10-per-cent slide in the dollar as occurred in 1961-1962 would not be in the best interests of the country. Not only would it cause further investor unrest, it would also increase the price of imports, raising consumer prices and perhaps be a factor in renewed inflation. As usual, economists are of two minds on this matter. One school of thought believes a 10-per-cent devaluation would add only one per cent to the consumer price index. Others think it could have a dramatic effect, given long-nurtured Canadian appetites for imported goods, mainly manufactured items.

If the decline in the dollar is long overdue, as some U.S. traders say, the slide should be orderly. Alarmed by the sudden drop the Bank of Canada is said to have spent between $500 million and $1 billion of its reserves to prop up the dollar. It should continue its judicious intervention to prevent any panic selling from taking hold. Meanwhile, the Bank of Canada could help matters considerably by lowering its prime rate a step at a time. In a year's time this could make Canadian interest rates competitive with U.S. banks, resulting in less foreign borrowing and a managed devaluation to a realistic level of about 93 cents U.S. currency.

In the current nervousness about the Canadian dollar it would appear that Wall Street speculation is as much to blame as the Quebec election. But Canadians should not delude themselves. A shaky dollar is just the first financial manifestation of our new condition. Until Confederation is resolved, the international community will view us with more interest and, unfortunately, suspicion. The next time you have a dollar in your hand — an increasingly rare occurrence for all of us — look at it and think how much it would be worth if we lose our country. Currency needs a national resolve in back of it too.

Wonderful Ironies

What makes British Columbia politics such fun to follow is that they are full of the most wonderful ironies. The latest is the resignation statement of Bill Stow, a senior finance department official who nearly a year ago publicly contradicted the outgoing NDP government's assurance that the 1975-76 fiscal year would end with a $40 million deficit.

He came up to the legislative press gallery with mounds of reports and for a couple of hours told reporters that the actual deficit would be closer to $325 million. For his efforts at truth-telling, Stow was demoted to a backwater research job in his department and had his pay cut 10 per cent.

Now he is leaving the provincial civil service to set up his own private fiscal policy institute, and who is his target this time? None other than the bottom line boys themselves, the financial wizards incarnate who swept into power to right the ship of state and keep it sailing on an even, non-deficit keel.

Trouble is, in Stow's expert analysis, that the Socreds bailed out too much too fast. They went overboard on the other side of the balance sheet, suddenly withdrawing more than $400 million from an already depressed provincial economy. That action spilled the wind from her sails and the B.C. economy today lies dead in the water.

Stow says the new government should have used a bit more finesse to balance the books. To eliminate such a large budgetary deficit all in one year was too harsh and punitive. That's what many amateur economists (taxpayers, that is) said at the time the Socreds brought in their first budget in March, but did anyone in government listen? Do you think they'll listen to Stow this time? Don't hold your breath waiting for the mea culpas.

RICHARD GWYN

As Usual, Blame the CBC

OTTAWA — Canadians saw their prime minister at his second best in his "fireside chat" to the nation last Wednesday evening. Only English-Canadians, mind you, saw the devalued version of Trudeau. French-Canadians, which no doubt is part of a gigantic plot, saw Trudeau at his best.

Trudeau made two runs in both English and French of his talk. The prime minister, his aides and CBC producers, all agreed that he was better the second time around in both languages. Except that the English network of the CBC then ran the wrong tape. The French network, though accused of being stuffed with separatists, got it right.

Talking Blind

The plot thickens. If you watched the half hour show on CTV you saw Conservative leader Joe Clark and New Democratic Party leader Ed Broadbent performing better than they did on CBC. The private network ran the CBC tape of Trudeau but cut about 3½ minutes out of Clark, dropping the part where he took a sideswipe at Trudeau over the auditor-general's report. Most CBC viewers found these comments irritating. Broadbent on CBC read woodenly from a teleprompter, but on CTV he was live, and much more alive.

One more footnote to the affair. Although in the past Trudeau has pre-empted national television on occasions, like last summer's pilots' strike, when his right to do so could be argued, this time there was no question about the importance of the subject. Questions, though, need to be raised about his way of using national television. None of the opposition leaders saw Trudeau's speech before making their own. All of them, thus, were talking blind and unable to respond to the prime minister's arguments.

All of this said, there's no question the show was well worthwhile. Federalists now have, in the concept of "fraternity," an emotional argument to put up against the compelling, ethnic appeal of separatism. Canadians have a better idea of where their government intends to go — following a policy of conciliation and of compromise with Quebec, but not of softness. Most important of all, suddenly, for the first time since the Parti Quebecois election victory, you get the feeling that maybe, just maybe, this battered old Confederation of ours is going to be around for a good many years yet to come.

If by his television speech, Trudeau has elevated himself out of the ordinary in a way that no other contemporary politician is capable of doing, he is elsewhere digging himself deeper into the political muck in a way that not even the dubest of politicians would do.

Trudeau's response to Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell's conclusion that the government's finances were "out of control" was, as you know, to set up a royal commission. He could not implement Macdonell's proposal for a comptroller-general to umpire government spending, Trudeau said at his press conference, because the ramifications of this new position "have to be studied in detail and it is this problem which has led us to appoint a royal commission."

Neither the opposition, nor the press, nor Macdonell accept Trudeau's explanation. Nor, it now turns out, does the chairman of the royal commission.

"The royal commission," says Allen Lambert, who is its chairman, "would not be affronted nor its work hampered in any way if any and all of the auditor-general's recommendations, including that for a comptroller-general, were implemented immediately." He has, Lambert told me in an interview, "already informed the government of my opinion."

Pepin Wants Out

As if Trudeau didn't already have enough problems, another one is about to fall into his lap. Anti-Inflation Board chairman Jean-Luc Pepin wants to leave his post as soon as possible.

Pepin already has had two meetings with Finance Minister Donald Macdonald to discuss his future. Among the possibilities are that Pepin might become president of the Canadian International Development Agency, or be appointed to some new trade promotion post or return to private industry.

Pepin's preferred time to leave is next spring. Trudeau then will be faced with the choice either of finding a successor for what is a thankless and quite certainly a short-lived job, or of winding down the entire price and incomes controls program at that time, a possibility that one highly informed source now reckons as "75-to-25."

Profits Necessary

For many years, I have criticized the socialist idea that equal distribution was the only important matter. As a simple man, I thought production was of first importance, as without production how can there be enough for adequate distribution? There is no real gain in equitable poverty. The real gain would be a decent and improving standard of living for all.

It is most interesting to observe the reaction to the recent statements of Prince Phillip in Britain, which supports my idea that one must first have something to distribute before doing so.

In a recent letter of mine which was published in the London Guardian, I pointed out it was absurd to wonder what had happened to all the bright young men formerly graduates from the best universities who had made Britain a great and prosperous trading nation, when the reason was quite obvious and plain for all to see. For many, many years, the academicians have taught young men that profit was a dirty word and anyone going into business was a money-grubbing, second-class kind of person. Youth is always idealistic and the young men rejected business careers as materialistic and selfish. The best brains were lost to business and the present, disastrous economic condition of Britain is the result. Now I read in the Guardian, a very realistic and liberal newspaper, that the unions and many politicians, including the prime minister, have at last discovered what they should have known all along, namely that profit and incentive are an absolute necessary (even in Russia) prerequisite to adequate production and a decent standard of living.

The result is that the Labor government is now very actively promoting the "new" idea that production and the means to attain it are of primary importance. I hope Canadian unions will take heed and govern themselves accordingly. Everyone, rich and poor and middle class, are now in great trouble and distress in Britain because ambition and energy have so long been decried in the schools. It is to be hoped unions and crackpot socialist theorists in Canada take note also. If they do not, we in Canada will suffer the same fate. Prince Phillip is not shouted down now. They are listening to common sense of necessity, at last.

Had I been a professional writer all these years, I would be very tempted to write: "I told you so."—M. P. Paine, 3260 Quadra Street.

Toller's Furs

Recently I saw a photograph of the beautiful skater, Toller Cranston, in a full-length fox fur coat and I was shocked to think that such a sensitive artist could be so insensible to the well being of another species.

Fancy a person of such talents as Toller possesses, not appreciating the fact that we humans have no right to make use of animals like that!

Some people eat meat, but I do think that eating comes into a different category than blatant exploitation of animals, like taking their coats from them.

Trapping, whether the steel jaw type or the so-called "humane" trap, is cruel. Animals kept on farms, for the purpose of getting their fur, are only relatively less cruel.

I was sad, indeed, to see Cranston wearing that fur coat.—Eve Smith, Port Washington, South Pender Island.

Sooke Voting

Your Nov. 23 report of the Sooke election (Sooke Sorts Out Count, Recount) was mischievously inaccurate. Where your misinformation came from I cannot even speculate. Certainly it was not from me or anyone else concerned, and your reporter was not there.

During a long evening of difficult counting, with 16 names on the ballot, there was not one interruption, and at the conclusion when it was seen that three out of the winning seven condidates were in a tie it was announced amidst laughter and speculation that a recount would be held.

On Monday the tying candidates and one other who could be affected were recounted, and when some errors showed up (which in fact were in the second count) it was decided to do a total recount.

This, contrary to your report, was done in peace and quiet without a word of controversy, and established the original result, and that even on the first count there had been only a normally acceptable margin of error.

Your unkind report has caused embarrassment to good people who willingly gave hours of their time to community service and to candidates for public office who accepted the verdict of the election with great good humour throughout. — C. A. Perkins, Capital Regional Board Director, Sooke Electoral Area.

Editor's note: A Times reporter made 12 phone calls to persons involved in the counting and recounting of the Sooke election. Unfortunately it was not possible to have a reporter there in person and the impression received was that the tallying process engendered some heated discussion. A recheck of the situation reveals, as Mr. Perkins says, that the discussion was at all times amiable despite the confusion. The Times regrets any embarrassment which may have been caused to any of the volunteer workers.

Fisher's Rage

"The choler, the rage near to heart attack" which came to Douglas Fisher and was expressed in his column in your newspaper has just come to my attention. He had read "a speech given by Gordon Robertson (either the No. 1 or the Big No. 2 Ottawa mandarin) to the Institute on Public Administration on the subject of Freedom of Information. It was a stirring reminder that our betters, are ready and well-placed to protect the state from the likes of MPs, journalists and professors."

I have been quoted several times by the Canadian Press in national news stories lately as a critic of the all-pervasive tendency toward secrecy of government documents. I share Fisher's objection to Robertson's derisive inclusion of MPs among the "special interests — the media, members of parliament, the pressure groups and the academics" who are demanding access to government documents. Let Gordon Robertson, however, defend himself if he so chooses; he is well able to do so.

My reason for writing is to correct Fisher's misrepresentations about the Institute of Public Administration itself. It was not and is not "the creation and creature of the Ottawa Mandarins." He should know, and everyone interested knows, that it was founded and nursed along for years as an infant organization by the late Chester Walters and Philip Clark, two senior Ontario civil servants. The institute's membership includes a good mixture of provincial and municipal administratrators, and also of university members on an equal footing, as well as federal civil servants. I speak from membership of over 20 years and the experience of having been chairman of the conference committee responsible for the recent annual conference at Halifax.

As conference chairman, I know that our local committee had complete autonomy. Any interference by federal or other "mandarins" would have been resented and rejected. Of course we co-opted one or two "feds" among six national corresponding committee members and had useful discussions with them and others in the federal service.

As to the major topic of openness of public documents, I do not share Gordon Robertson's view but felt like coming to his aid as the underdog in a discussion which I primarily had been responsible for setting up. The other panelists, Donald Rowat, MP Gerald Baldwin, and Jean-Marie Martin, were outspoken critics of his point of view.

The annual conference programs of IPAC are among the best in the land. Spokesmen from business, labour, voluntary organizations, as well as critical university types, take part in every program and give the "feds" and other public servants their lumps unsparingly. Why, in reaching for the top, we almost invited Douglas Fisher.

The theme for the conference at Victoria, in August, 1977, is to be something like bureaucracy versus democracy, according to the Victoria committee's announcement. Does that sound like a conference manipulated by the "feds"? One hopes that Mr. Fisher will come along and join in the fray. — Guy Henson, Director, The Institute of Public Affairs, Halifax.

Anonymous Letter

How many of you in Central Saanich received an anonymous letter headed "Are you a worried Taxpayer?" Did it not upset you to receive a letter sent out by a person or persons who didn't have the intestinal fortitude to sign it? I commend Mr. Stanlake and Mr. Chapman for signing their names because they obviously could back up any comments or statements in their letter "To the Voters of Central Saanich."

Would the individual or individuals be so kind as to respond to my letter through this paper and please sign your name so we all know who had the audacity to use the so-called democratic system to put fear into people through insinuations, then signed their letter "Vote No on Saturday, November 20th."

If I was undecided before the two letters arrived, the anonymous letter convinced me to sign in favor. — Mrs. Jean Querin, 6984 Veyaness Road.

Tax Laws

On Nov. 20, you carried an article on "only the rich get a break at income tax time." This was written by W. D. Laurie, president of the B.C. Institute of Chartered Accountants. I am very surprised that a man of such a "profession" should make such a statement since it is not only untrue but grossly and apparently deliberately misleading. No individual can write off the interest on his domicile, rich or poor, and the tax laws apply equally to everyone. Except, the bigger your income the bigger percentage you pay in taxes.

In brief, if misguided socialism believes you can punitively tax sources of investment money and still run a viable economy, take a look at England for the results.—W. E. Cowie, 3160 Uplands Road.

Park Services

As we of Park Services Interdenominational near the end of the calendar year 1976 we wish to express to you our very deep appreciation and best thanks for all of the kind, substantial help courteously afforded us by the Victoria Times through your church editor, Mr. Don Gain, in the publicizing of our summer Sunday evening Beacon Hill Park services for the summer season of this year.

We all were highly pleased with the articles published, and are satisfied that they contributed in no small measures to the excellent attendances at the services.

We extend to you and yours the compliments of the season and every good wish for your progress and welfare in the New Year. — M. F. Hunter, Chairman, 1320 Dallas Road.

An American View of the Possible Breakup of Canada

By WILLIAM SAFIRE

(Safire is a former speechwriter for President Nixon who now writes a regular column for the New York Times.)

At a small reception following a State Dinner in Paris in February, 1969, I found myself standing next to President Charles de Gaulle. Anxious to appear knowledgeable in world affairs, I mumbled something about how he had really stirred Canadians up a couple of years before with his cry of "vive le Quebec libre" to a crowd in Montreal.

He looked at me through eyeglass lenses thick as Coke bottle bottoms with eyes that seemed to wonder why a president of the United States would bring along such a simpleton as a member of his staff. "One day," de Gaulle stated, with absolute certainty, "Quebec will be French."

The ghost of le grand Charles must have smiled imperiously last month when the province of Quebec astounded Canada and the world by electing two-thirds of its representatives to the National Assembly from the Parti Quebecois separatist party.

Many worried Canadians, pointing to public opinion polls in Quebec that do not seem to favor independence, say that the regional election was only a rejection of the Liberal party leadership on other issues. They insist it cannot be interpreted as a vote for separation of Quebec's six million French-Canadians from the 16 million English-speaking Canadians across North America.

But movements gathering momentum lend respectability to ideas previously held to be unthinkable. Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, himself a French-Canadian, was thought to be a symbol of a unified Canada's ability to accommodate minority desires. However, Trudeau — with his praise of Castro, his rejection of Taiwan, and his foolhardy manipulation of Canada's economy — is losing control.

The head of the victorious Parti Quebecois, Rene Levesque, plans a provincial referendum on independence two years from now. Since a chance exists that any separatist referendum victory would be followed by secession, the federalists who believe in one Canada will probably put the issue to a nationwide vote before that time. Separatists, who might be a majority in Quebec, would still be a minoirty in the nation — and such a decision is the whole nation's to decide.

What does this mean to the United States? The possibility now exists of an argument to our immediate north on the subject of "Self-determination" vs. "nationhood." Such national arguments have a way of encouraging hotheads and becoming fierce (in our own case, it took the South over a century to triumph).

As a neighbor, the United States must refrain from poking its nose in. But as fellow Americans, we can hope that the much-maligned spirit of nationalism — even including its prickly anti-United States manifestations — will prevail over separatism.

The reason is that the breakup of Canada would not create two strong nations, but two — and perhaps more — weak and quarrelsome bordering states, each inviting exploitation from abroad.

If Canada were to acquiesce in its own dismemberment, a modest proposal would be recalled that was put forward in the 1844 victory of James Polk — "Fifty-four forty, or fight." At that time, the United States angrily disputed British ownership of part of the Oregon territory leading up toward Alaska, to the longitude of 54-40.

President Polk, however, preferred to fight Mexico for the annexation of Texas than the British for the Canadian province now called British Columbia, which is why the northern border of the United States is the 49th parallel. We did not get to 54-40, nor did we fight.

But if Canada divides, would there not be pressure from above and below the 49th parallel to merge Canada's western provinces into a United States of North America, with our "Manifest Destiny" marching unvexed from Oregon to Alaska?

If separatims succeeds, would not a Sasketchewan Statehood party press for admission to the United States, eiting our common language, common democratic tradition, common western frontier culture, and — above all — territorial contiquity?

A Canada that tolerated the separation of its largest (in area) province would start down the road of further subdivision, resolving regional differences by further Balkanization and — in some cases — affiliation with the United States.

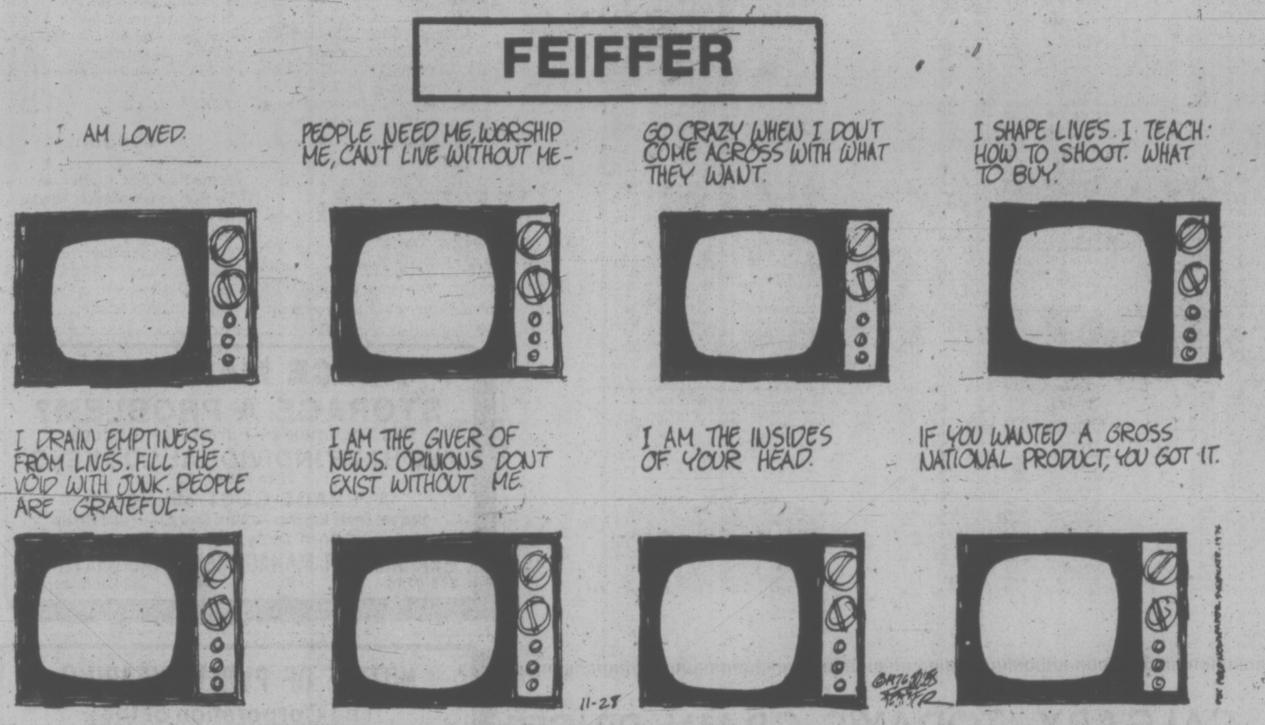
DE GAULLE
. . . he was certain

We would be better off with one Canada. Canada would be better off with one Canada. The Canucks are not like the Kurds, a separate people decimated and dominated by oppressors; nor is Canada a New World Yugoslavia, five nations held together by the legend of an aging leader.

Canadians ought to stop pretending the separatist threat is not serious, and start making it clear that whatever autonomous and culture-respecting arrangements are made for the Quebecois, they flow from the font of one diverse but unified nation.

Charles de Gaulle, with his incitement to a "liberated" Quebec, was wrong. I only wish I could think of another occasion in which de Gaulle, in the long run, was wrong.

FEIFFER



Britain Losing Ideals As Well As Her Power?

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

Two American writers, long resident in (—) are visited by policemen and told they are being expelled from the country. They are not allowed to know the specific reasons, or the names of their accusers; they have no right to a hearing. They learn only that the authorities suspect them of such things as "disseminating information harmful to the security of" the state.

It all actually happened last month. In South Africa? In the Soviet Union? In Chile? No, it happened in Britain.

The British government issued expulsion orders against two American critics of the Central Intelligence Agency, Philip Agee and Mark Hosenball. Agee is the former CIA man who denounced it and named alleged agents in his book, "Inside the Company: CIA Diary." Hosenball has written for British radical journals but now works for the mass-circulation London tabloid, the Evening Standard.

In ordering them out, the Home Secretary, Merlyn Rees, used for the first time a special provision of a 1971 immigration law. It allows him to invoke security and deny accused persons the right to appeal, to be represented by lawyers, to cross-examine witnesses and so on. Their only right is to make "representations" to an advisory board — three retired civil servants. An English commentator called the procedure "a charade of justice."

Americans who think of Britain as the original source of their liberties may find the affair puzzling. They may be the more bewildered because Rees is not some figure from the far right in British politics. He is a Labor home secretary in a Labor government.

But it is a great mistake to assume that politicians to the left of centre in Britain care instinctively about civil liberties, as is usually the case in the United States. Most do not. When a Labor government in 1968 excluded from Britain thousands of Kenya Asians who had been offered and accepted British nationality, few Labor voices criticized what in America would have been a shocking — and unconstitutional — action.

"Left" has a largely economic connotation in British politics. It means struggling for union rights and higher wages, for example. The reason must be the deep class divisions in the country. Resentment of privilege is so bitter that niceties of law and justice seem an elitist concern.

The present prime minister, James Callaghan, has notably illiberal views on a spectrum of issues that could concern American civil libertarians, such as immigration and freedom of the press. His late cabinet colleague, Richard Crossman — in diaries now being published — characterized Callaghan's attitude at a committee meeting on the Kenya Asian question as follows: "He wasn't going to tolerate this bloody liberalism . . . Anybody who opposed him was a sentimental jackass."

The decision to expel the two Americans has aroused little outrage in Britain — shamefully little, in my opinion. The National Union of Journalists objected strongly. The Sunday Times published a thoughtful critical article. But The Times, separately edited, said the denial of any fair opportunity to contest the charges was "reasonable." The editorial went on to say:

"Nationals have a right to tilt the balance of doubt in their favor when it is believed that their own security is being jeopardized by aliens on their soil"

Think what George Orwell, liberal and stylist, would have done to that evasive phrase "it is believed." The whole question is whether an official can have a sound basis for belief if he does not allow the other side to be heard.

Bitter history in both Britain and the United States has shown that truth is not likely to emerge from secret, one-sided proceedings. That was the lesson of the outrages committed in loyalty-security cases.

The British episode gave Americans a particular reason to celebrate Thanksgiving in 1976. Such a travesty of justice could not occur in the U.S. because we have a written Constition, enforced by judges. The Fifth Amendment ensures due process of law for citizen and alien alike. No alien could be deported without the opportunity for a full and fair hearing.

But many Americans have a deep feeling for Britain, and their reaction will be one of sadness. Whatever its economic troubles, Britain has been an island of civilization in an inhumane world.

Have the small-minded men who have mostly governed the country in recent years now lost her not only power but ideals? If so, understanding and affection from abroad will inevitably go the same way.—

A Double Standard for 'Cheaters'

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — What industrial incentives have in common with old age pensions is that both are conditional grant programs — as are price supports for farmers, training allowances for jobless workers and medicare payments for doctors.

Since all of these programs — and the host of others like them — involve payments of public money to specified categories of private citizens, it would be reasonable to expect that government would monitor all of them equally closely.

Ensuring that first-time homeowner grants, for example, go only to those who are in fact buying their first homes should occasion the same degree of diligence as ensuring that social assistance payments are made only to those who meet welfare eligibility requirements.

It should. But it doesn't.

When the Ontario government paid out $87 million in first-time homebuyer grants last year, it simply took applicants' word for it that they had never owned a home before. That may seem like a strange thing to do, but it wasn't half as strange as the province's reaction when a subsequent spot check by its auditors revealed a 10 per cent ineligibility rate among recipients.

Contrast that with events in British Columbia where, notwithstanding the absence of any evidence of widespread misuse of welfare, the province decided to establish a "fraud squad" to search out and apprehend welfare cheaters.

Whether his fraud squad finds enough illegitimate payments to equal the cost of their own salaries is irrelevant, Mr. Vander Zalm told a social workers' conference shortly after the program was announced. What is essential, he said, is that justice be done and be seen to be done where public funds are involved.

It is a long way from the welfare fraud squads to the spot checks of middle-class home buyers. And it is even farther to the virtual absence of any checks at all on doctors who bill medicare for services they allege to have performed, while medical associations oppose government contacting patients to see if the services were in fact performed.

Nor does the double standard end with the degree to which government monitors its various programs. It extends to the courts and the very different treatments accorded those who are found to have defrauded the public purse in various fashions.

According to federal revenue department figures, of the 2,000 Canadians convicted of income tax offences last year, only three received jail sentences.

There was no jail sentence for the lawyer who evaded $8,800 of tax by failing to report the full amount of his fees, for example. He was fined $1,050. A farmer who evaded $7,300 of tax was fined $500; a builder who evaded $3,100 of tax was fined $800.

There are no such national statistics for cases of welfare fraud, but individual cases are reported in the press.

There was the recent case of an Ottawa couple, for example, who pretended to be separated so that the wife and three children could claim welfare — a total of $12,000 over a four-year period before they were caught. They were each sentenced to one year in jail.

A Brantford mother of three who received $1,500 from the welfare department by claiming she had no other source of income when she was in fact receiving a Manpower retraining allowance of $100 a week received a six-month sentence.

That was the same sentence meted out in October to a Calgary mother of three who obtained $5,000 more from the welfare department over a three-year period than she was entitled to by failing to report her supplementary work income.

There is absolutely no difference, of course, in the cost to the public treasury of $1,000 of tax fraud, welfare fraud, homebuyer fraud or medicare fraud. It's only government officials and judges who act as if there were.

Lament of Unhandyman

By RICHARD COHEN

The plasterer came the other day. It was early in the morning when he arrived and, by the time I had padded down the stairs in my bathrobe, he was already on his ladder looking at a sagging ceiling caused in the dim past by a leaking bathtub. He took the contract out of his back pocket, looked at the amount I had agreed to pay his company, looked up at the ceiling and shook his head.

"Man," he said, "You is being robbed."

Well, the truth of the matter is that I is always being robbed. I have been robbed by painters and electricians and plumbers and auto repair shops. I am prey to anyone who wears work clothes and speaks with the local accent. I size them up quickly, ask them if they're honest and, if they say yes, I hire them. This does not apply to the men who come around to sell firewood. With them I buy only from those who have craggy faces and are missing teeth. They have the best wood.

The thing of it is, of course, that I am reduced to having to joke about the situation. The truth is too depressing. It is that I am hopelessly incompetent at running my house, at keeping it in repair and doing the sort of things I ought to be able to do. I leave as much of that as I can to my wife. Workmen don't expect her to know anything.

For a time I couldn't care less about my ignorance. I was an apartment dweller, and when anything went wrong I knew how to pick up the phone and call the landlord. If that didn't work I wrote a letter, and writing was something I knew a bit about. Usually I got some action. Always I wrote terrific letters and some day I will publish them in book form so that other apartment dwellers will know how to get satisfaction from their landlords. I'll give you one hint now. Always mention the board of health. For some reason it's the one agency to strike fear in what passes for a landlord's heart.

All that, though, is behind me. I am now a homeowner — my own landlord, my own resident manager, my own superintendent, I am costing myself a fortune trying to fix things myself, compounding the situation out of ignorance, and then calling a workman in desperation. The ceiling is an example. When water started to drip from it I did nothing. It's the apartment mentality. I sort of expected that someone would come and fix it. Finally, I realized that someone was me.

I've been mulling over my predicament and have come to some conclusions. The fact of the matter is that I've been ill-served by my education. I spent most of my life learning things that have been of no earthly use to me, like algebra, and not taught things I really need to know, like plastering or auto repairing.

Think about it — when was the last time you used algebra, the last time you had to figure out how long it would take two boys to mow one lawn with half a lawnmower?

Algebra was just one example. My life was crammed with esoterica. I took a course called navigation taught by a teacher with a pilot's license who used to speak to us in morse code. I went from algebra to geometry, learning things about circles and triangles that I, for one, have not used since. I studied hygiene and learned at a rather advanced age that brushing my teeth would be a good idea. I even studied studying itself in something called study hall. All I remember of that is being half-asleep and watching a girl named Caro walk around the room in a sweater. There are, after all, some things you never forget.

The truth of the matter is that I know all these courses have their place. I am a believer in general, academic education, a traditionalist who thinks that education in and of itself is worthwhile. But I knew what the kids were talking about some years back when they were yelling "relevance," and I worry a bit now that the trend is going the other way. A bit of practical knowledge would not have hurt me.

But practical knowledge was reserved in those days for kids who sported DA haircuts and wore their garrison belts with the buckle on the side. They were the ones marched off to auto shop, a place located somewhere in the bowels of the school that I never saw. I know it existed because I would see the auto shop kids from time to time. They had grease under their nails and they dropped words like "manifold" or phrases like "zero to 60."

I pretended to be disinterested, realizing already that they were being programmed out of the system, excluded from the college preparation program, doomed to a life in what we used to call the "real world" of manual labor. In short, they were the losers, we were the winners.

I wish they would remember that when they're on top of ladders early in the morning.

Selling Quebec Stocks Not a Good Investment

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Some investors selling off stocks in the wake of the Quebec election may be acting in haste and repenting at leisure, says a Vancouver brokerage firm.

Pemberton Securities Ltd. says the price decline is following the trend of British Columbia after the election of the NDP in 1972.

In that election, British Columbia industrial stocks fell sharply but, on average, had recovered in five months. A few stocks that were the potential targets of a government takeover continued to slump.

The lesson, the company says, is that many of the present industrial issues on a downhill slide can be expected to recover once the separatist election shock begins to wear off.

In some cases, the stock recovery might take longer than five months but a recovery is likely over the longer term.

Stocks of companies that operate mainly outside Quebec should rebound fairly quickly.

In British Columbia, B.C. Tel, Westcoast Transmission and Inland Natural Gas did poorly after the election on Aug. 30, 1972. B.C. Tel shares fell 8.5 per cent in September. Inland Natural Gas was down 10.2 per cent and Westcoast Transmission, not yet a takeover target, was down less than three percent.

In October, 1972, the NDP named Westcoast and Inland Natural Gas to their takeover list, along with B.C. Tel. Shares of Westcoast immediately fell to 20.5 per cent below their August level. Inland Natural Gas was down 16.9 per cent and B.C. Tel was steady but at 7.3 per cent land Natural Gas was down below the August level.

By December, things had worsened for all three companies. B.C. Tel was down 8.9 per cent (from August), Westcoast was down 22.3 per cent and Inland was down 20.3 per cent.

By contrast, Cominco, MacMillan Bloedel and Woodward's rebounded strongly from their B.C. election slump.

In October Cominco was down 10.9 per cent from its August level. MacMillan Bloedel fell 12.8 per cent and Woodward's was down 7.8 per cent.

All had recovered by December. In that month Cominco was less than four per cent below its August level, MacMillan Bloedel was down only 5.2 per cent and Woodward's was actually 9.6 per cent higher than in August.

The lessons from the B.C. election, which are parallel to those of Quebec in many ways, are that the market as a whole can be expected to recover after the shock has worn off and some stocks will rebound strongly if they are not adversely affected by the political events.

Recovery can be expected to take longer in Quebec, however, for two reasons. Quebec separation has a stronger impact across the nation than the election of an NDP government in B.C. and the duration of uncertainty is prolonged by the two-year delay in the referendum on separation, the company says.

Recovery need not take two years but some individual stocks may be under a cloud that long.

The uncertain factor will be the attitude of large American investors to this latest in a string of unfavorable investment events.

The earlier unfavorable events, Pemberton Securities says, included the wage and price control program, the Foreign Investment Review Agency, Canadian oil policies, the purchase of potash companies by the government of Saskatchewan and the policies of the NDP while in power in B.C.

If these large U.S. traders begin to move out of Canadian stocks then forecasts for an early recovery would have to be revised.

Canadian Grain Trade Uncertain

WINNIPEG (CP) — A veteran private trader says Canada's grain system is showing signs of stagnation, feebleness and uncertainty.

Charles O. Swartz, founder and chairman of Northern Sales Co. Ltd., says the reason lies in a restrictive, bureaucratic sales monopoly which is sapping the strength and bypassing the marketing talent of the private grain trade.

The way out, he says, may lie in "an intelligent partnership" between government and private industry.

Swartz made his case in a series of articles in the Winnipeg Free Press weekly Report on Farming.

He says if production targets are met by other producing countries, and if Canada cannot increase its crop and export levels well above the average of the last 10 years, Canada by 1990 may well account for only eight per cent or less of world wheat exports. Ten years ago it had 25 per cent.

"Should we continue to experiment with alleged 'orderly marketing' while countries adhering to open competition continue to expand production and sales at every turn."

The Canadian wheat board, a Crown agency, has sole jurisdiction over export sales of wheat, barley and oats. Three years ago a producer referendum rejected the idea of placing rapeseed, a vegetable oil source, under board authority.

One effect of government monopoly control, Swartz says, is to place in jeopardy the future of the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange "whose only crime against the Canadian grain industry was that it reflected too often the ugly realities of world supply and demand."

"In refusing to use Winnipeg, the board cites the dangerously thin volume of activity as the main reason, yet it is the board's deliberate boycott of this forum that has produced such a situation that can only work to the benefit of the board's publicly stated readiness to take over all grains listed on the exchange."

BCGEU Loses Guards' Appeal

The B.C. Government Employees Union corrections component has lost a battle to reverse disciplinary measures taken against three Wilkinson Road jail guards in January.

The component went through grievence procedures on behalf of the guards with the Government Employee Relations Bureau.

However, these proved unsuccessful and the matter was taken to arbitration.

One guard was fired, one suspended for a month and the other reprimanded for allegedly failing to perform their duties Dec. 16, 1975, when 10 prisoners escaped.

Arbitrator John Sherlock ruled against the union both in the case of the man dismissed and in an award dealing with the suspension and reprimand.

However, John Hurren, BCGEU staff representative, said Monday an appeal against the ruling on the dismissal has been filed with the B.C. Labor Relations Board.

The results of the LRB's ruling on that case will determine whether the union will appeal the other decision, he said.

Hurren said the union is appealing on the basis that it feels the arbitration awards were worded too generally and did not spell out in detail where the guards were negligent.

Such specifics are necessary if the employer is going to have just cause for disciplining employees, he said.

Hurren said he would not identify the men involved until he had an opportunity to speak to them and see how they feel about their names being used.

The arbitration hearing on the dismissal was held during two days in September and the hearing on the other two cases was held Nov. 15.

Food Fair Suggested For City

Victoria MLA Charles Barber suggested Tuesday the city should hold an annual food fair, offering prizes for the best restaurant meal, top chef and most proficient waiter or waitress.

He said the event would create an international reputation for Victoria as a city of fine restaurants, like San Francisco.

Barber made the suggestion at the monthly tourist discussion group sponsored by the Victoria Visitors Information Centre.

Fred Oldfield, president of the Victoria branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association, who was attending the meeting, said the suggestion is "excellent" and it will be discussed at the group's executive meeting Tuesday.

Barber said each restaurant should be encouraged to outdo the others by offering the best meal at the lowest possible price.

An independent panel of judges would select the various winners.

Monday Crush at Post Office

A post office spokesman reports seasonal mail volume is reaching a peak, especially on Mondays and urges the public to avoid using post offices that day if possible.

It will also speed service if patrons try to time their visits to stamp wickets up to 11 a.m. and after 2 p.m.

Spokesman Buzz Sawyer said business mail seems to be heavy on the first day of the week and there is a daily increase of activity during the noon hour and for an hour each side

Deadlines for Christmas mailing occur within the next three weeks: Overseas, general, Dec. 8; Great Britain and Ireland Dec. 15; U.S. and other parts of Canada Dec 13; Greater Victoria Dec 17.

Sawyer notes all overseas first-class mail now goes by air

But the biggest problem the post office faces is wading through one million pieces of mail each day at the main post office in these pre-Christmas weeks.

Normal daily volume is 400,000 letters and parcels.

Unlike previous years, the post office is not expanding its parcel handling operation into Bay Street Armoury, but is using space in the federal building basement.

All seasonal hiring is complete, although a few individual owner-drivers may be required to supplement the mail van fleet on an irregular basis. The post office keeps a list of such drivers and will not take new applications.

Normal job-hunting took a 266 per cent jump at mid-month when 1,100 applications for casual post office work were turned over to Manpower.

Up to 600 people are hired at this season to help with Christmas mail volumes, doubling the post office inside and outside staff for a few weeks.

All this year's requirements were met on two days — Nov. 12 and 15 — with about 500 applications left over.

A sign has been posted on the door to turn new applicants away.

But the post office remains a favorite target of job-seekers. When openings arise at any other time of the year the mail service can expect 300 applications for a single job.

Victoria post office has expanded bulk handling operations westward into Langford with the opening at the weekend of Bryn Maur sub-depot in the 700-block Goldstream.

The 2,100-square-foot location is supplementary to depot D at Parsons bridge, View Royal, and was made necessary by the surge in population of the unorganized areas of Langford, Colwood, Glen Lake and Metchosin.

Bryn Maur will serve as a distribution point for rural routes and carriers.

Logging Co-Op Closed

OTTAWA (CP) — The bankrupt Ehattesaht Indian Co-op near Zeballos officially closed today, but MP Ron Huntington says three management people will continue to draw salaries.

Huntington (PC—Capilano) asked officials at the Commons Indian and northern affairs committee if it is true the logging operation's general manager will continue to work for $4,000 a month, and that two other management people will recieve a total of $3,200 a month.

Cam Mackie, assistant deputy Indian affairs minister, confirmed that the three are being kept in their jobs, but by a court order. He did not elaborate but it was assumed that a bankruptcy court had ordered the three to settle the affairs of the collapsed co-op.

The co-op ceased operation last spring after six months in business. Progressive Conservative MPs have estimated that almost $10 million, much of it federal tax money, has been lost.

Huntington said Indian affairs has lost $1.7 million, economic expansion $5 million, the Bank of Montreal $700,000 and private businesses who extended credit, almost $2 million.

Marine Science Aid Jumps

Federal government funding of private marine science projects in B.C. is expected to reach $850,000 by the end of the fiscal year.

Bob Smith, industrial relations officer for Environment Canada in Victoria, said Monday there is a little uncertainty regarding the amount of money available between now and the end of March, 1977.

But last year the government funded $800,000 in contracted research and development projects and there are indications the amount this year will total $850,000 or better, Smith said.

Marine sciences for the Pacific region of Environment Canada cover the mainland and Vancouver Island coasts, together with the Arctic shores.

Most of the private industries working on government research and development contracts are in the Victoria area where they are close to the department's marine scientists who guide the projects.

Smith noted the total paid to private contractors in 1972 was less than $100,000; in 1971 it stood at $90,000.

Deputy director general Dr. Bill English said it had been a successful five years and that more contracting out is expected.

By inviting private operators to seek contract work for environmental scientists, the department has encouraged some newer firms to develop. There are not enough government funds to support many of these, however.

About four new companies have evolved in the Victoria area as a result of government contract policy.

Smith believes there could be more if the companies themselves were more vocal about services they can offer, work they could do for government, and how much — or little — is allotted for outside contracts.

He said they have not yet seen the advantage of forming a marine sciences industrial association to promote their industry and to speak on their behalf.

English believes it is necessary for the government to proceed with the proposed marine technology centre, on government land opposite the Institute of Ocean Sciences now under construction for department of environment scientists at Patricia Bay.

This would provide leased premises to private operators engaged in research and development in appropriate surroundings and close to the marine sciences.

The scheme has had setbacks through austerity in federal spending and lack of support at the local level. North Saanich, the municipality in which the centre would be located, objects to the "industrialization" of the essentially rural area, even though the development would not be manufacturing in character.

There is also public concern about the capacity of ground water sources on the north end of Saanich Peninsula to supply both the centre's and community's fresh water supplies.

Red Cross Seeks Turkish Aid

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Red Cross is accepting donations now for relief in Turkey where 3,600 people were killed by an earthquake last week, Darrell D. Jones, president of B.C.-Yukon Red Cross, said in a news release that funds for the purchase of relief items may be sent to the society at 4750 Oak St. Jones said donations made directly to the Red Cross are sent to the disaster scene without any deductions made for administration.

BUILDER KNOCKS SAANICH COUNCIL

'You Don't Want Affordable Housing'

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich aldermen were scolded Tuesday for being unrealistic about housing needs.

Builder Chris Pike, former chairman of the Victoria Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada's municipal affairs committee, told aldermen they must consider other alternatives to single-family homes or four-storey apartments.

"You don't want affordable housing," Pike told council's housing committee.

He said townhouses, zero lot-line homes, cluster housing and other types of construction are needed.

He faulted Saanich for encouraging "square boxes."

He cited Gordon Head as an example of what can happen with "square boxes."

"Right now it's a lousy looking district. It's terrible," he said. "It's going to give you problems in the future. It's restricted to middle-aged people. We need a cradle to grave set-up."

"There are a lot of alternatives from a planning point of view," assistant municipal planner Tom Jenkinson conceded, "but they must be politically and publicly acceptable."

"The key is that it has to be done well. There are lots of alternatives and we have to look at them."

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said designs of "affordable housing" could be controlled through land-use contracts.

Ald. Fred Severson observed, "It's the price of lots that's killing us."

He said Saanich council, alone, should not be responsible for providing affordable housing. The provincial government should assume some responsibility.

"I'm going to stand up and be counted. Why should we always be responsible for housing at the expense of people who put us in? We can only build when we have sewers," he said.

He and Ald. David Paterson said deputy housing minister Larry Bell had promised help in providing services when council and provincial officials held a meeting on housing needs several weeks ago but no positive steps have been taken.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said he had heard from Bell's office.

"But it wasn't a truck of gold, that's for sure," Tremayne said. "Rather, we told them they have to come up with something."

'No Christmas' Say Residents Of the Alkazar

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The 21 elderly tenants of the Alkazar Mansion on Fairfield Road are slowly coming to grips with eviction orders telling them to be out in two months.

Now, instead of Christmas shopping, they will be trudging around the city looking for a new place to stay, hoping to find somewhere as inexpensive and friendly as the Alkazar.

"There'll be no Christmas here this year," says Amy Cresswell, a 16-year tenant and part-time manager. "They've spoiled it for all of us."

Mrs. Cresswell who refused to give her age ("I'm an elderly woman") said the Alkazar is not like an apartment, but a home.

Even the few new tenants who came in from time to time, she said, were immediately made part of the family.

Now all the elderly tenants are fearful they won't find a place to stay that is affordable, she said.

Rents average $110 to $120 per month.

A previous owner of the building was handed a fire marshal's upgrading order, but the work was not carried out. The new owners—Reeson and Pinch Homes—citing the extensive renovations needed, then applied to the city and was given a demolition permit.

Reeson and Pinch were also granted a shorter eviction notice time — two months instead of three — because of the fire marshal's order.

Mrs. Cresswell said no one in the Alkazar has much money and the eviction notice has caused so much worry that some tenants, including herself, are having difficulty eating and sleeping.

And some, she says, haven't yet fully understood the eviction notice.

One of the tenants is 97 years old this month and has lived in the Alkazar since 1917 when she was young and working.

"She loves the place. It's her home," Mrs. Cresswell said. "But she doesn't seem to be quite taking it (the eviction notice) in."

She said another old man, about 90, is "almost in tears" at the prospect of having to move.

"The old lady next to me is so confused she hasn't done anything (about finding another apartment)" she said.

Mrs. Cresswell is ill with sciatica and hasn't been able to get out much. But she's hoping she can go searching for another place to live.

"It's heartbreaking," she said. "Something should be done. You should write an article about old people being turned out in the cold."

Mrs. Cresswell fondly remembered an old landlord, Neills Knudsen, who never raised the rent, gave Christmas presents to all his tenants every year, put up a big Christmas tree and would regularly stop in and visit the elderly residents.

But those happy days are gone forever.

Jimmy Took A Walk

Seven hours later, in the pitch black, he was still walking as 50 searchers combed the countryside for him.

They eventually found him at 6:45 p.m. tired, wet and hungry in thick bush four miles from his home at 2125 Harborview Road.

Sooke RCMP said the boy wandered from his home at 11:30 a.m. and his mother reported him missing at 1:10 p.m. after she and neighbors failed to find him.

An RCMP tracking dog was brought down from Nanaimo and by 4:30 p.m. about 50 people including neighbors, police, firemen, youth groups, Emergency Measures Organization members from Saanich and citizen band radio operators—had begun a search over a wide area of the community.

Sooke volunteer firemen Gary Jones and Pat Farquhar located the boy after hearing a faint whimper in bush near the Geater Victoria water board pipeline.

DIFFERENT SLANT on life is given Harry Skates of Vancouver's Silver Line Fire Equipment Ltd. as he stands atop Saanich's new $140,000 aerial truck he delivered today. Below him, training officer Lieut. Paul Smith tests the new 100-foot ladder which will allow firefighters to reach eight-storey buildings.

Shipyard Strike Averted

Negotiators are recommending acceptance of a last-minute recommendation from mediator Fred Geddes for settlement of a contract dispute at Burrard Dry Dock in Vancouver and Yarrows in Victoria.

Representatives of 24 shipyard unions met in Victoria Tuesday and voted in favor of the recommendations.

The 800 shipyard workers will vote on the proposals during the rest of the week and the ballots will be counted Monday.

Jim McAvoy, president of the Joint Shipyards Conference of Unions, said Tuesday that because of a lot of hard work by Geddes "we have hopefully averted a strike."

The unions had voted earlier this month to reject the companies' final offer and then voted by a 60-per-cent margin for strike action to back their demands.

Final negotiations with the companies broke off Nov. 17 and Geddes was asked to withdraw leaving the unions free to serve 72-hour strike notice.

There hasn't been a strike at the shipyards for 13 years.

The companies' final offer, retroactive to Aug. 15, 1975, was for $1-an-hour increase over 25 months for a journeyman on a base rate of $8.33 an hour.

Offer Okay With Firemen

Saanich firemen have agreed to an interim 1976 contract with the municipality provided they are given certain guarantees related to the wage gap with Vancouver firefighters.

The firemen voted at a meeting Tuesday night to accept the contract provided they receive the guarantees in writing.

A letter of intent from the municipality was promised Tuesday and was to include a provision that Saanich firemen are not to drop more than 2.5 per cent — or $33 a month — behind their Vancouver counterparts when their agreement is approved by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

The letter would also state that if, when Victoria firemen settle their contract, they move up on Vancouver firefighters, then the Saanich contract will follow suit.

The interim offer from the municipality is for a seven-per-cent wage increase and a one-per-cent increase in fringe benefits retroactive to Jan. 1.

However, Ken Ebbs-Canavan, president of the Saanich local, said today that eight-per-cent total package is expected to go to about nine per cent once the Vancouver contract is settled.

Ebbs-Canavan said a cut back in services begun by the firemen last Friday will end once the union has the letter of intent from Saanich.

The interim agreement will bring a first class fireman's monthly salary up to $1,380 a month from $1,290.

Developer's Approval Claim Denied

A claim that the Capital Regional District approved a 77-unit townhouse development next to Goldstream Park before the project went to a public hearing was denied Tuesday.

The denial came from Langford director Earl Pallister.

The claim was made at the hearing by Ron Scattergood, principal of Glenview Developments, a firm seeking to rezone the land from motel use to residential.

The proposal is being opposed by ratepayer groups, conservation, and environmental societies and the federal fisheries department on the grounds effluent from the subdivision will pollute Goldstream river—a valuable salmon-rearing river.

Scattergood told the meeting he presented two choices to the regional district to build 77 self-owned or 77 rented (motel) units.

"They went along with the townhouses," he said. "They gave the proposal its blessing."

Pallister, who chaired the meeting, took exception to Scattergood's statement.

"The regional board has not approved the proposal," he said. "It has never come up before the board to the advisory planning committee. You may have got the approval of a planner, but not the board."

In answer to a question from Hans Fredericksen, a member of the audience, Scattergood said he submitted the proposal to the regional district seven or eight months ago.

"This whole affair looks to me to be all politics," replied Fredericksen.

He said he went to the regional district in August and was told by planners there was no such proposal for Goldstream.

Scattergood also told the hearing the Pollution Control Board had approved his septic tank scheme for the housing subdivision.

"I'm surprised they are not here," he said.

But a spokesman for the government department denied today Scattergood had any dealing with the pollution branch or board.

Mary Thyne, of the Concerned Citizens of B.C., submitted a petition signed by 200 nearby residents opposing the project.

"It's not only seepage from septic tanks which will pollute the river," she said. "The pollution from surface drains and runoff from the blacktop will do as much damage."

She recommended monitoring the chemistry of the water.

Jack Henson, developer of a nearby subdivision, said the townhouse proposal will depreciate the homes of people in the neighborhood.

Lloyd Gudewill, of the federal fisheries protection service, and Howard English, a member of the Amalgamated Conservation Society, also urged a river study.

"Sewage from septic tanks, even it is treated, would still contain enough nutrients to speed algae growth and choke thousands of salmon that spawn in Goldstream," English said.

Gus Underwood, spokesman for 1,200 members of five Indian bands in the area, said Indians will lose their fishing rights, established by treaty, if the river becomes polluted.

Scattergood told the meeting townhouses would be more pleasing to the eye and would probably be better looked after than motel units.

"Blackmail", said a member of the audience. "You are attempting to pressure us into accepting the townhouses."

He Swings From Sublime To Gorblimey

High above his Oak Bay guest house, Bill Scott sits surveying the world from his lighthouse-like lookout and tells you he's a crackpot.

But you know he isn't. Well . . . not completely.

"I'm a veteran in stupidity; you're just an amateur," he informs me when we meet. And in one hand I'm clutching a copy of The Lighthouse Philosopher, the book Victoria journalist Ed Gould has written about the adventures of Bill Scott. I've come prepared!

Published by Hancock House and selling in local bookstores for $9.95, it tells how Bill rose from the East End slums of London to a key position with the Chinese Maritime Customs Service as a lighthouse technician on the coast of China for 23 years.

It tells, too, of the ordeals he faced in Second World War Japanese internment camps in Shanghai; of how his family fled to Victoria for safety and how he later followed. And it tells of his somewhat different philosophies that led to his famous soapbox pratories in Beacon Hill Park and Centennial Square and to his countless running battles with the government, City Hall and the legal profession.

But to the average reader, Gould's book is likely to paint the literary picture of "Bill Scott the two-edged sword." There are so many good thoughts. "You're never poor as long as you can laugh" is one of his favorite expressions. But there are so many contradictions that when you finish the last page your mind is likely to be spinning.

Bill Scott . . . many contradictions

Scott is highly critical of Chiang Kai-shek, who he said died one of the richest men in the world, and of the Americans for bleeding China dry. Yet he admits that by bribing officials at every level he managed to get "15 crates of his hard-earned furniture and art works" out of China. He justifies this by saying that when he saw bureaucrats and diplomats using every form of bribery and corruption to get their collections out of the country, he decided to do the same.

Scott plainly has little time for lawyers, money lenders, banks and finance companies. Yet he owns a pawnshop on Johnson Street.

He has long claimed he has been a Communist; yet in the book is quoted as saying "I was born a Christian and I shall die a Christian. And he is a Communist who is so much of a Capitalist that he owns not one but two businesses!

In his defence, Scott points out he "only chiselled peanuts, not coconuts." But where do you draw the line, I wonder?

And so I climb the steep circular stairs to the lookout and then sit sipping Chinese tea amid all the carvings and memories of the past in the cosy den below and I ask Bill about some of these anomalies.

"I'm a Christian because I support the moral ethics of Jesus Christ, and the philosophy in China today is applied Christianity without the creed, dogmas and ceremonies of the church," he explains.

And he decided to take his

max low

Chinese art works with him when he saw the Japanese destroying beautiful things all around him.

Then what, too, of this image of being a crackpot, the image he so carefully nurtured through soapbox oratories and political campaigns to the extent that he lost his credibility with Victoria people?

"I've been handicapped since birth by having a mischievous personality," he says with his now-famous grin. "I'm a Pisces. I can go for the sublime to the gorblimey. It's my nature, swinging in opposite directions . . . the positive is the negative."

But Bill Scott is a serious man, too, though not enough Victorians have got to know this side of his nature. Although no longer seen on his soapbox in the park, at 78 he is still actively campaigning and his latest cause is for preschool education between the years of three and six on the lines Mao Tse-tung had so much success with in China.

"It is through the children we must bring change and the first six years of their lives are the crucial ones," says Scott. "A civilization is no better or worse than its teachers and its students."

Then it's back to stupidity for an eloquent finish.

"The only legacy worth leaving to you is the legacy of my stupidity and my generation's stupidities," Bill says with feeling. "The stupidities of producing two world wars, of causing conflicts between capital and labor, and of insanely using our intellectual energy to create pollution and the rapid extinction of our natural resources . . ."

"If we have left you something worthwhile in the arts and literature, cherish them. But throw into the garbage the stupidities of my generation."

Parity Is Main Problem Facing NHL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Parity among existing National Hockey League teams, not amalgamation with the World Hockey Association, is the major problem facing NHL owners, Bill Hughes, president of Vancouver Canucks, said Tuesday.

Hughes said in an interview that the six teams in the NHL before expansion started 10 years ago cannot continue to be preserved at the expense of other teams.

"A parity of some kind has to be attained so that at the start of the season each team has a 50-50 chance of getting into the playoffs," said Hughes, NHL governor for the Canucks.

"There has to be an awakening on everyone's part—the owners and players, particularly—that we are putting on a show of skill in the NHL. That show of skill must be balanced, or we will kill the goose that laid the golden egg."

Hughes said he is concerned about the health of NHL franchises in Atlanta, Denver, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. He said the price tag for getting into the NHL "is unreal and most of the expansion teams were under-financed in the first place."

Vancouver, which paid $6 million to get into the NHL seven years ago, is one of the few teams to show a profit while paying the entrance fee over a long-term period. Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., parent company of the Canucks, reported a net profit of $299,455 for the year ended Aug. 31, 1976.

Hughes said the NHL must realign its present teams, perhaps under the system used in English soccer, where the top teams play in the first division. Teams that play poorly are relegated to the second division each year and top second-division teams are promoted to the first.

Hughes also said that for NHL teams to reach parity, draft choices must not be traded. He cited the collection of first-round draft choices held by the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens.

Hughes also said that too many games against international competition are hurting attendance at NHL games. He said it was shortsighted of the NHL Players' Association to enter a team in the World Cup playoffs next April in Vienna.

"There will be televised games from Vienna that will be in direct competition with Stanley Cup playoff games. We are eroding the value of our own league at home by participating in the World Cup."

Economic survival of some NHL teams also is up to the players, Hughes said, adding that the average salary in the NHL for a player last season was $82,000.

"The players have a responsibility to the people—the fans — who pay their salaries," said Hughes. "They are in the top two per cent of the wage earners in this country and must act accordingly.

"The NHL and hockey in general has—and is—going through tough times. The players must recognize this. Their actions will go a long way in determining the future of hockey in America."

IT ALMOST HAPPENED!

On Cold Night in Buffalo

By The Associated Press

Suppose they held a basketball game and nobody came?

It almost happened Tuesday night in Buffalo, but four hardy souls braved —12 weather and waded through two feet of snow to get to Memorial Auditorium.

Seventy-three tickets were sold at the door. It was the lowest total attendance in the history of the National Basketball Association franchise.

The Braves' faithful followers were rewarded with a 119-114 victory over Seattle SuperSonics, as Bob McAdoo scored 17 of his 29 points in the final quarter.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, New York Nets edged New York Knicks 104-103, Cleveland Cavaliers defeated Denver Nuggets 99-93, Indiana Pacers beat Phoenix Suns 103-97, Golden State Warriors topped Chicago Bulls 125-120, San Antonio Spurs nipped Detroit Pistons 130-129, Milwaukee Bucks defeated Portland Trail Blazers 115-106 and Los Angeles Lakers beat Washington Bullets 109-102.

Buffalo started as cold as the weather, falling behind 16-7 in the first five minutes. But they then scored 12 points in a row and were on top the rest of the way.

Bruce Seals led a Seattle comeback, scoring 10 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter before fouling out. Rookie Bob Wilkerson converted an offensive rebound, putting the Sonics within 116-114 with 12 seconds left.

But McAdoo iced it with three free throws.

In the first regular-season meeting between the two New York clubs, Nate Archibald scored 15 of his game-high 34 points in the fourth quarter, leading the Nets to victory. John Williamson added 24.

Brian Winters scored a career-high 43 points as the Bucks broke a nine-game losing streak and won their first game under new head coach Don Nelson.

Winters hit 20 of his 30 field-goal attempts.

Wil Jones and Dave Robisch combined for 25 points in the fourth quarter as the Pacers erased a nine-point deficit to beat Phoenix. Jones tallied a team-high 23 points and Don Buse had 15 assists.

Chicago went down to its 12th consecutive defeat, a team record, as Phil Smith scored 33 points and Rick Barry 28 for the Warriors.

Schedule Shuffled For Russians' Visit

Officials of the Western Canada Hockey League announced Tuesday a number of scheduled games will be changed to accommodate exhibition contests between league teams and Moscow Selects, who will be in Canada to take part in an international junior tournament.

The game between Victoria Cougars and New Westminster Bruins Dec. 12 in New Westminster has been rescheduled for Dec. 15. Bruins will meet Selects Dec. 12 in the Queen City.

Another scheduled game, Dec. 12 between Kamloops Chiefs and Portland Winter Hawks, has been moved to March 9 in Kamloops, while the game originally slated for the latter date at the same site involving Chiefs and Bruins, will be played Dec. 10.

Selects will go to Portland to meet Hawks on Dec. 13.

Wayne Babych of Portland highlighted the two games played Tuesday by just missing a league record.

Babych, who finished up with four goals as Hawks topped Regina Pats 15-1, started off his splurge with three goals within a span of 25 seconds during the sixth minute of the first period. Jim Harrison set the three-goal record of 24 seconds in 1966.

Meanwhile, Saskatoon Blades snapped a five-game losing streak by edging Flin Flon Bombers, 4-2.

HAITI SITE FOR PLAYOFF

VANCOUVER (CP) — Soccer Canada announced Tuesday the final playoff game between Soccer Canada and the United States will be played Wednesday, Dec. 22, in Port au Prince, Haiti.

Canada and the U.S. tied their series for the right to advance further in World Cup Soccer competition, forcing the deciding game in Haiti.

COUGARS ROLL TO WIN OVER LAKERS

LAKE COWICHAN — Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Hockey League, sparked by a two-goal effort from Gary Lupul, defeated Lake Cowichan Lakers of the South Island Big Six League 5-2 in an exhibition game here Tuesday night.

Single Cougar goals were added by Geordie Robertson, Kevin Clackson and Dennis Fenske.

Mark Coloumbe and Ed Croteau counted for Lakers.

Cougars return to league play Saturday when they play host to Regina Pats at 8:30 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

Dave Williams Is Doing Best To Keep His Two-Way Promise

By The Canadian Press

Dave Williams made a promise to himself before the current National Hockey League season and now is doing his best to keep it.

The pugnacious Toronto left winger, along with a group of other Maple Leaf lesser-lights, combined Tuesday to hand Patrick Division leading New York Islanders their fourth loss in five starts, this one a 4-2 setback on home ice.

Williams, 22, who leads the NHL in penalty minutes this season with 150, has never claimed to be a prolific goal scorer. But he said during training camp in September that he was going to concentrate on playing good two-way hockey and prove something to critics who have cast him in strictly an enforcer role.

Williams, who scored twice last Saturday to pace the Leafs to a 4-2 upset win over Boston Bruins, scored the tying goal Tuesday, his ninth of the season, as the Leafs staged a third-period comeback to erase a 2-1 Islanders lead.

Bob Neely and Scott Garland, who have scored a total of 10 goals between them this season on Toronto's third line, also beat Islander netminder Glenn Resch. Ian Turnbull scored for the Leafs in the opening period.

Jude Drouin was the only Islander to beat rookie goaltender Mike Palmateer, who blocked 28 shots. Resch faced 36 Leaf drives.

New York lost defenceman Denis Potvin in the second period with a neck injury. He collided with the Leafs' Lanny McDonald and the Toronto player's stick struck him on the cheek.

Potvin was taken to hospital for x-rays which proved negative.

In other games, New York Rangers and Atlanta Flames played to a 2-2 tie, Washington Capitals downed Pittsburgh Penguins 6-4, Colorado Rockies surprised St. Louis Blues 5-3 and Buffalo Sabres stopped Boston 6-2.

At Atlanta, goalie John Davidson turned back 42 shots as New York Rangers came from behind to gain the tie. Phil Esposito scored the tying goal for the Rangers on a power play at 13:43 of the second period.

The Flames outshot the Rangers 33-16 in the two final periods.

Nelson Pyatt scored two goals to pace the Rockies to the franchise's first-ever victory in St. Louis. The club, which played in Kansas City before this season, managed only a tie in seven previous games at St. Louis Arena.

At Landover, Md., Tony White scored his first two goals of the season to lead the Capitals to only their seventh win in 23 starts.

The Sabres got two goals from Terry Martin, one of them coming during a four-goal Buffalo second period. The victory was the fifth in the Sabres' last six road games and the first Boston loss on home ice since Dec. 23, 1975, when Los Angeles Kings beat the Bruins 4-3.

YANKS BUY SLUGGER

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees announced the purchase of veteran outfielder Jimmy Wynn from Atlanta Braves in a straight cash transaction Tuesday.

Wynn, who will be 35 in March, batted .207 for Atlanta with 17 home runs and 66 runs batted in last season. He also stole 16 bases and led the National League in walks with 127.

Wynn came to the Braves in a major winter deal with Los Angeles last year.

Braves on Top

Saanich Braves took over sole possession of first place in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League by blanking Kerry Park Islanders of Mill Bay 12-0 Tuesday night at Pearkes Arena.

The win snapped a tie for the lead with Fuller Lake Flyers.

Bill Adkin scored three goals for Saanich while Rob Colwell, Dale Ewasiuk and Ron Jobson added double tallies and singles were fired by Murray McLaren, Lorne Halme and Ed Beauchemin.

Mike Dutch and Mitch Lascelle combined to make 15 stops to record the shutout while Islander goalie Tony Burns blocked 61 shots.

FLAMBOYANT FIDRYCH NAMED AS TOP ROOKIE

NEW YORK (AP) — Right-handed pitcher Mark Fidrych, the flamboyant crowd-pleaser of Detroit Tigers, was named the American League's rookie of the year today.

Fidrych, who laced his mound performances with eccentric behavior such as talking to baseballs and patting down mounds, collected 22 of 24 possible votes from a special committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The remaining two votes went to Minnesota catcher Butch Wynegar.

Fidrych, 22, of Worcester, Mass., proved to be not only a winner with a 19-9 record and league-leading earned run average of 2.34, but was one of the biggest gate attractions in the major leagues in 1976.

In the 29 games Fidrych started, he drew a total paid attendance of 901,339. Quite frequently, the announcement in advance that Fidrych, nicknamed The Bird, was going to pitch would be enough to sell out a park.

Fidrych started slowly but won eight games in a row one month into the season and was selected to start for the American League in the all-star game at Philadelphia.

In addition to leading the league in ERA, Fidrych led all pitchers with 24 complete games in 29 starts.

Besides being the first pitcher to win the AL rookie honor since Stan Bahnsen did it with New York Yankees in 1968, Fidrych is only the second Detroit player to be named. Harvey Kuenn was the other, in 1953.

In his first season with Minnesota, Wynegar batted .260, hit 10 home runs and drove in 69 runs.

Connors Spurns Masters Event

HOUSTON (AP) — Jimmy Connors was missing Tuesday when the eight-star field was completed for the $130,000 Grand Prix Masters tennis tournament starting Sunday.

Although Connors had indicated three weeks ago he would not compete here, Masters officials had held out hopes until Tuesday he would change his mind.

Rexford H. Caruthers, Connors' lawyer in St. Louis, was quoted as saying Connors is contractually committed to a World Championship Tennis schedule that does not permit him to play the Masters this year.

Tournament officials said Connors thus becomes the first player in the seven-year history of the Masters to qualify and then turn down an invitation to compete for any reason other than illness.

Added to the field Tuesday were Harold Solomon and Brian Gottfried of the United States and Wojtek Fibak of Poland.

They joined five earlier qualifiers — Raul Ramirez of Mexico, Manuel Orantes of Spain, Guillermo Vilas, the 1974 Masters Champion from Argentina, and Americans Eddie Dibbs and Roscoe Tanner.

Gottfried replaced Connors as a result of moving into ninth place in final point standings after Monday's conclusion of the 48-tournament Grand Prix circuit. Connors had finished third in the singles standings.

Chris Keeps No. 1 Spot

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert is again the No. 1 woman tennis player in the world, according to the unofficial rankings of World Tennis Magazine.

It is the third straight year on top for the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., star, who won 44 of the 62 tournaments in which she played.

Evonne Goolagong of Australia was placed second, followed by Virginia Wade of Britain, Rosemary Casals of Sausalito, Calif., and Martina Navratilova, the Czech defector now living in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Canadian Wildlife Federation Opposes Gun Licence Proposal

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

"Common sense dictates that, where possible, legal means should be imposed to reduce criminal misuse of firearms, not to jeopardize the ownership and legitimate use of guns by responsible Canadians."

This statement by president Robert N. Pedersen places the Canadian Wildlife Federation in direct opposition to the federal government's controversial Bill C-83, now awaiting third reading.

He goes on:

"The federal government has opted for a massive, meaningless bureaucratic operation to licence some three million owners of rifles and shotguns, rather than initiating effective criminal law.

"Instead of deterring criminals, Bill C-83 will require all firearm owners to apply for a licence to continue ownership, to fill out application forms not yet described, to provide two guarantors of as yet unspecified status, to subject themselves to the discretion of local firearms registrars who in turn must follow guidelines to be laid down at some future date by order-in-council.

"For this, gun owners must pay a fee not yet specified."

All of which might be laughable if it were not for the fact that we pay some pretty hefty salaries to the people who put this cosmetic legislation together.

This writer seriously doubts whether the pending act will reduce the criminal use of firearms one little bit. It will only serve the purpose of pulling some proverbial wool over the eyes of most Canadians who don't own firearms.

"Indeed, this system becomes more ludicrous since many aspects of the proposal duplicate existing licensing operations," states Pedersen.

"For instance, all provinces already licence hunters (subject in most cases to a competency test) and have the authority to licence firearm dealers in the same manner they licence other businesses."

Pedersen also echoed a thought yours truly raised in the last piece on this proposal.

"As for the proposition that killing with long guns will be reduced by the federal licensing system, it should be remembered that the majority of such killings are committed by persons who would have no trouble acquiring a licence because, before the event, they would in most cases be considered normal citizens."

Existing or additional provisions under the criminal code could be used to deal with "identifiable threats" who might otherwise be involved in such killings.

The code currently allows courts to prohibit a person convicted of offences which involve guns from owning or carrying any firearm for up to five years.

How about making that a lifetime ban?

Such moves, coupled with stricter enforcement by the courts of existing regulations, would go a long way toward restricting the use of firearms by the criminal element without creating an additional expensive government bureaucracy.

A simple piece of legislation requiring dealers to delay delivery of a firearm for some specified period of time after purchase would also likely help prevent some of the shooting deaths resulting from violent anger, jealousy or sudden madness.

Passage of Bill C-83 won't come in the immediate future — the federal government appears to have enough on its hands right now.

But, since it's costing taxpayers time and money just to keep it alive, isn't it about time for a quick burial?

ED MURRAY SELECTED

NEW ORLEANS — Ed Murray of Victoria, a freshman at nearby Tulane University, has been picked as the place-kickers on the Associated Press all-south independent universities football team for 1976.

Murray, a graduate of Spectrum Community School last spring, played three seasons of juvenile football for Saanich Hornets.

He led the Tulane team in scoring, handling all the place-kicking and some of the punting because of his highly-accurate soccer-style booting.

Murray had a tryout with B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League earlier this year but decided to accept a scholarship at Tulane.

Aussie Visit to Keep Shields Family Busy

It will be a busy weekend for the Shields family as basketball goes international at UVic's McKinnon gym Friday and Saturday.

Ken Shields, coach of UVic Vikings, will be behind the bench for one game each night and in the lineup for another as Vikings, Victoria Scorpions, Burnaby Bullets and Dandenong, a touring men's team from Australia, take part in a four-game exhibition series.

Ken's wife, Kathy, who coaches UVic girls' jayvees, will be in the lineup for Victoria Home Lumber both nights when they play a touring Australian women's team from New South Wales.

Besides coaching the Vikings, Ken is a forward for the Scorpions.

Although not a tournament, the men's series is the first of three major competitors for Vikings during the Christmas break in their Canada West University Athletic Association schedule.

Vikings are also scheduled to take part in the annual Christmas Classic at UVic, Dec. 18 and 19, against Scorpions, UBC Thunderbirds and University of Winnipeg Wesmen of the Great Plans Athletic Conference.

The third event for Vikings will be the Golden Boy college tournament in Winnipeg, Dec. 28 and 29. It marks the first time Vikings will take part in a major college Christmas tournament.

"These tournaments are a very necessary part of a university basketball program," UVic coach Ken Shields explained. "You need a major tournament to provide the necessary competition over the Christmas break and also to get a look at other teams in the country."

Dandenong includes a number of U.S. players, among them six-foot-10 centre Cliff Parsons, a 1968 All-American at the U.S. Air Force Academy and a U.S. AAU All-American in 1972; Charlie Palmer, a six-foot-six guard from Missouri who had a tryout with Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association, and Robert Rhoads, a six-foot-three guard from Wake Forest University who was a high school All-American at Mercer, Penna.

Another top Australian prospect with Dandenong is six-foot-six Mike Tucker, who played for his country in last summer's Montreal Olympics.

The New South Wales women's team, known as the Waratahs, is led by six-foot-two Marie Bennie, a starting centre on Australia's national team. She'll be joined by Julie Gross (6-3), another member of the national team.

Also expected to see extensive action are Janet Williams and Jean Bywater, both vice-captains, Kerry Donnelly (6-3½) and floor leader Debbie Lee.

This is the first overseas tour by the New South Wales women's team and only the second time an Australian state all-star team has travelled internationally.

Home Lumber and Waratahs start the action Friday with a game at 5 p.m. Dandenong meets Scorpions at 7 and Vikings play Burnaby at 9.

On Saturday, Home Lumber and New South Wales play again at 5 p.m., Vikings and Dandenong meet at 7 and Scorpions tangle with Burnaby at 9.

Tickets for each day, available at Scorpion Men's Wear and the UVic athletic office in the McKinnon Building, are $2.50 for adults, $1.75 for students and $1 for children.

Shooting War Won by Leafs

It was an unhappy night for goaltenders Tuesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

It was a shooting battle as Al Decker scored three times and assisted on three tallies to help Maple Leafs trip Juan de Fuca Merchants 13-8 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League scorefest.

Les Bergman and Ron McNeil scored two goals each for Leafs. Singles were chipped in by Bob Martin, Kerry Brewster, Brent Davis, Chris Riddell, Dave Wilson and Bill Dustin.

Bryan Carbery and John Murray each scored twice for Merchants. Singles were contributed by Randy Kerr, Darrell Ell, Brad Girling and Andy Konopacki.

Larry Boldt made 43 saves in the Merchant net while Ken Olson blocked 31 shots for Leafs.

Juniors Get Fast Start In Hoop Win

Victoria Junior Men jumped to an early 16-2 lead and never let Stevens Interiors get close the rest of the way while recording an 80-53 Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League victory Tuesday night at Lambrick Park Junior High School.

Forrest Partington and Rob Spanier set the pace for Juniors with 14 points each and Ben Shotten struck for 12 as all 10 players on the squad hit for at least two points.

Bob Lee fired 15 points and was the only player to reach double figures for Stevens, who trailed 44-23 at half time and are still without a point in nine starts.

JUNIOR MEN (80): Forrest Partington 14, Rob Spanier 14, Ben Shotton 12, Charlie Hunter 10, Bob Vanderford 8, Greg McGinnis 8, Pete Cavin 6, Keith Brown 3, Kerry Leung 3, Scott Hind 2.

MURTAUGH IN HOSPITAL

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Danny Murtaugh, who retired recently as baseball manager of Pittsburgh Pirates, was admitted to the intensive-care unit of a local hospital Tuesday after suffering a stroke.

"The extent of the stroke damage has not been determined, but a team of specialists is evaluating his condition," said Dr. K. S. Dale, a hospital spokesman.

Jack, Joe and Rocky Better, Says Max

CHICAGO (AP) — Two months following his 71st birthday, Max Schmeling almost looks as if he still could hold his own in a boxing ring. And when he considers the paydays of today's top heavyweights, he wishes he could.

"I was born 40 years too early," said the man who knocked out Joe Louis in 12 rounds in 1936, only to be pummelled in one round in a rematch two years later, when he made $600,000.

Schmeling, who crossed the Atlantic several times to make his mark on American boxing, was back again last weekend from his home in Hamburg, West Germany, for a luncheon in his honor.

He said he respects Muhammad Ali, whom he still calls Cassius Clay, but thinks several heavyweights from the past could have beaten him.

"Joe Louis was better. I would rate Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano, all of these ahead of Cassius Clay. He's a very good man in the middle of the ring. But at infighting he's not that good."

Schmeling lamented the lack of fresh faces in his old weight class.

"I'm surprised there aren't any new fighters around. You always see the same people in the heavyweight division. Not only in this country but all countries.

"The boxing game in this country is pretty good. You've got a lot of good heavyweights, Joe Frazier, Cassius Clay, George Foreman, Ken Norton. We don't have anyone in Europe except for Joe Bugner."

On June 12, 1930, Schmeling years later, Sharkey took the heavyweight crown vacated by Gene Tunney. Schmeling was declared the winner after Sharkey hit him with a low blow in the fourth round. Two yers later, Sharkey took the title back.

On June 19, 1936, Schmeling decked Louis in the 12th round of a non-title fight, ending Louis's winning streak at 27. Both had wanted a shot at champion Jim Braddock and Louis got it despite the loss.

Louis won the title in 1937 and, on June 22, 1938, retained it in 2:04 of the first round by knocking down Schmeling three times.

Schmeling retired officially in 1939, but fought as late as 1948 to make money he had lost during the Second World War. He now is a successful businessman.

WIMBLEDON SETTLES FIGHT WITH LADIES

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The All-England Tennis Club announced on Tuesday a whopping increase in prize money for the 1977 Wimbledon tournament and settled its quarrel with the women stars.

Prize money for Wimbledon, approaching its 100th year, will total $375,622.

In a compromise agreement, the women's purse will be 80 per cent of the men's. Last summer the women, with Chris Evert as spokesman, demanded equal prize money and declared they would not play at Wimbledon in 1977 unless they got it.

"They have agreed to the new prize money, and I think they are happy with 80 per cent," said Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All-England Club. "They asked for parity with the men, but I don't think they ever expected it."

Miss Evert, the current Wimbledon champion, negotiated for the women last summer as president of the Women's Professional Tennis Association. Betty Stove of the Netherlands now is WPTA president.

Tje women's singles crown in 1977 will be worth $23,220, up from $19,200 this year.

The men's singles champion will get $25,300, up from $21,500.

Wimbledon still declines financial help from sponsors, but Burnett hinted it is coming in through the back door. He said the extra prize money is coming from "other sources," not from ticket prices which are up about 10 per cent to help defra extra costs of the 100th anniversary celebration.

Newport Extends Shut-Down Date

NEWPORT, England (Reuter) — Newport County, the English League Fourth Division soccer club that was threatened with having to close down Dec. 11 because of financial problems, now will continue to play at least until after Christmas.

Chairman Cyril Rogers says that the proceeds from an exhibition match against Coventry City would enable Newport to guarantee its players wages for at least two more weeks after the original deadline.

SEAHAWK GAME ON TV

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — All Kingdome tickets for Sunday's football match between the Seattle Seahawks and the Chicago Bears have been sold, which means the game will be televised locally, says Seahawks ticket manager Gordon Green.

The National Football League contest is scheduled for 1 p.m., and the usual TV blackout is lifted if a game is sold out 72 hours in advance of game time.

It is the third time this season the Seahawks have sold out and the second time the sellout was registered early enough for the TV blackout to be lifted.

Trophy Voting Also a Romp

NEW YORK (AP) — Before he ever played a game for the University of Pittsburgh, Tony Dorsett wanted to quit.

But, says coach Johnny Majors, "he never backs away from a challenge."

Dorsett didn't back away from this one, either, and it paid off Tuesday when he won the Heisman Trophy as the outstanding college football player in the United States.

It was a runaway for Dorsett, almost as easy as his romps through Pitt's 11 victims this year for an all-time National Collegiate Athletic Association record of 1,948 yards.

The five-foot-eleven, 192-pound senior, son of an Aliquippa, Pa., steel mill worker, carried each of the country's five voting regions — East, South, Midwest, Southwest and Far West — and received 701 of 863 first-place votes, 112 seconds, and 30 thirds for a total of 2,357 points. Twenty voters left his name off their ballots. The voting is tabulated on a 3-2-1 basis.

TONY DORSETT
. . . thought of quitting

Ricky Bell, Southern California's star running back, finished second in each region but polled only 1346 points on 73 firsts, 485 seconds and 157 thirds. In third place was another running back, Michigan's Rob Lytle, with a total of 35-85-138—413.

But the Heisman Trophy, the single-season record of 1948 yards, the NCAA career mark of 6082, the all-time scoring total of 356 points — all could easily have been nothing more than a string of zeroes if Dorsett had had his way.

"I was sick and tired of football," Dorsett said. "The first time I wanted to quit was at a high school all-star camp for the Big 33 game in Pennsylvania. There were a lot of other things I could be doing instead of getting my body all banged up, but if I had I'd probably be just another person out on the concrete. The second time was after training camp my freshman year at Pitt. The transfer from high school to college really did it to me.

"I'm basically a quiet person. It was hard for me to even go out and make friends with my own team-mates. I was ready to quit school. My mom told me if I quit it would have broken her heart, but the person I'd probably be hurting the most would be myself."

Boxla Body Plans School Program

SURREY — Officials of the B.C. Lacrosse Association are planning to introduce a lacrosse program to elementary and junior secondary schools in the province.

At the association's 52nd annual general meeting, delegates also voted to continue with the program of clinics for referees and coaches that was introduced in 1975 and to amend the constitution to reduce the number of vice-presidents from four to one.

Tom Davies of New Westminster was re-elected to the position of president with Wayne Clark of Richmond named to the vice-president's post.

Other officers include Terry Prentice of Esquimalt, executive secretary; Barry Menzies of Saanich, director of minor divisions; Rick Richards, Vancouver, senior director; Wally Henderson, Vancouver, director of senior referees, and Mike Vanchu, Vancouver, director of minor referees.

'Worried' Stenmark Rated Cup Favorite

VAL D'ISERE, France (Reuter) — The World Cup ski season opening next week promises to be one of the most open campaigns ever, with West Germany's Rosi Mittermaier out of the picture and Swedish ace Ingemar Stenmark worried about his form.

There are no Olympics and no world championships this season, so the heart of the struggle will be the World Cup which begins here Dec. 8.

Established champions from the Big Four of European Alpine skiing — Austria, Switzerland, Italy and France — are certain to be jostled, and often toppled, by up-and-coming rivals from other countries.

Despite his own worries, Stenmark, the men's World Cup holder, is favored to repeat his 1975-76 triumph.

Stenmark certainly performed like a favorite Monday when he raced to a faultless victory at Livigno, Italy, in the Livigno Trophy combined event.

He also won Sunday's special slalom, a warmup for the World Cup campaign.

Any one of a dozen girls, including Austria's Brigitte Totschnig and Monika Kaserer, Switzerland's Lise Marie Morerod and Marie Therese Nadig, France's Daniele Debernard and Fabienne Serrae, has a chance of taking over from 1976 World Cup holder Rosi Mittermaier, who quit international racing after her Innsbruck Olympic double gold medal triumph.

Mittermaier's bid for an Olympic triple was halted in the giant slalom by Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., who scored Canada's only Olympic gold.

Like Stenmark, Miss Morerod appears to be heading for the Cup campaign in excellent form.

She dominated both heats at Aprica, Italy, Tuesday and won the Aprica women's special slalom as three French rivals — Perrine Pelen, a 16-year-old rookie; Patricia Emonet and Debernard — took the next three places.

The cream of the world's men and women skiers face a program of 60 downhill, slalom and giant slalom races held at 28 resorts in 11 countries before the Cup trail ends in Spain next March.

It is unlikely that the four outstanding men of the moment — Stenmark, Austrian Franz Klammer and Italians Piero Gros and Gustavo Thoeni — will clean up the honors among them this season as they have in the past.

Last winter, Canadian downhill aces Ken Read, 21, of Calgary, and Dave Irwin, 22, of Thunder Bay, shattered the European monopoly with audacious winning runs in two World Cup races.

Three other Canadians — Jim Hunter, 24, of Calgary; Dave Murray, 23, of Abbotsford, B.C., and Steve Podborski, 19, of Toronto — also have the skills and desire to win almost any men's downhill event.

Klammer, 22, remains the downhill hero after his Innsbruck Olympic gold medal success and five World Cup victories last year, yet the Austrian ace believes slalom specialist Stenmark will again come out on top over all.

The 20-year-old Swede is expected to collect most of his points in the slalom, which brought him five victories last season. But his great strength is that he can also finish well up the list in the giant slalom and downhill.

Stenmark says, however, "I fear I may fall back this winter. I lost a lot of training time during the summer because I had to do my military service for three months."

If Stenmark does slip, Gros and Thoeni will be ready to pounce. Slalom specialist Gros is confident after winning the Olympic gold medal at Innsbruck and Thoeni, a dominant figure in men's skiing since 1969, wants to climb back to his old perch after a disappointing 1976 season.

In women's racing, the departure of Mittermaier has thrown the competition wide open.

Another factor is the probable return of Austrian Annemarie Proell-Moser, five times winner of the World Cup who quit the international scene last year. Despite undergoing stomach surgery in mid-November, the 23-year-old redhead hopes to be fit for Val d'Isere.

The French girls have avoided the troubles that have hit the French men's team in recent years.

Bobby Hull Line Explodes

By The Canadian Press

The line of Bobby Hull, Anders Hedberg and Ulf Nilsson exploded for 14 points Tuesday night as Winnipeg Jets rolled over San Diego Mariners 8-2 in one of four World Hockey Association games.

In the other games, Norm Ullman scored in overtime to lift Edmonton Oilers to a 3-2 win over Phoenix Roadrunners, Birmingham Bulls ended a three-game winless string with a 3-1 victory over Cincinnati Stingers and Quebec Nordiques edged New England Whalers 2-1.

Hedberg helped the Jets move back into sole possession of first place in the West Division by scoring four goals in the game in Winnipeg played before 7,121 fans.

Hull, in his second game this year after being kept out of the lineup due to a preseason wrist injury, scored one goal and assisted on four others.

Nilsson drew five assists with other Winnipeg goals going to defenceman Barry Long, Bobby Guindon and Veli Ketola.

Mariners got their two goals from Tony Cassolato and Kevin Morrison early in the third period.

PHOENIX (2): Jerry Rollins (1st and 2nd). EDMONTON (3): Bob Russell (3rd), Rusty Patenaude (9th), Norm Ullman (8th). Attendance: 6262.

The Jets outshot the Mariners 39-20 and took three of nine minor penalties.

In Edmonton, Ullman's unassisted goal on a power play at 7:42 of overtime gave the Oilers their fourth straight overtime win.

Bob Russell and Rusty Patenaude provided the other Edmonton goals with Jerry Rollins scoring both goals for the Roadrunners. Rollins forced the overtime when Phoenix pulled goalie Clay Hebenton for an extra forward with 25 seconds to play in the third period.

Hebenton stopped 34 shots in the game while Ken Broderick faced 20 shots in the Edmonton net. Roadrunners took four of the seven minor penalties.

Two Distance Events Slated by Track Club

Victoria Flying "Y" Track Club has scheduled two events for runners during the month of December.

The eighth annual 21-mile mixed medley relays are scheduled for Sunday in Beacon Hill Park and the entry deadline is noon on the day of the race.

Starting time for the event is 1 p.m. Further information may be obtained by telephoning meet director Jack Hutchinson at 592-1837.

Entry deadline for the annual Boxing Day one-hour run at Victoria High School is Dec. 23. Additional information is available from meet director Bob Martin at 656-2088.

Both events feature competition in age brackets for both male and female athletes.

Juan de Fuca Hollyspiel Opens Friday

Opening ceremonies for the Juan de Fuca women's "hollyspiel" are scheduled for 1 p.m. Friday at the Juan de Fuca Curling Club.

Competition starts at 1:45 p.m. in the 48-rink event, which will end Sunday afternoon.

Four Tied In Top Spot

Four teams are tied for first place in the Carling O'Keefe men's super league of curling following action at the Racquet Club Tuesday night.

Co-leaders Tim Horrigan and Bob Gallagher suffered defeat while runners-up Steve Skillings and the Bob Hawkes foursome scored victories.

Gord Paterson upset Horrigan 5-2, while the Hawkes rink, skipped by Lyle Garraway, knocked off Gallaugher 9-8.

Skillings defeated Keith Dagg 8-3 and Ted Jurista downed Len Becker 8-2 in other matches.

Horrigan, Gallaugher, Skillings and Hawkes each have five wins and three losses while the other rinks, Paterson, Becker, Jurista and Dagg, each have three wins and five losses.

5-Point Plan On Way To Aid B.C. Farmers

RICHMOND (CP) — Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday the provincial government will study the province's 11 marketing boards.

In his first major speech to farmers, Hewitt told the annual meeting of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture that the review will determine the effectiveness of the boards and inform the public about the boards' responsibilities to consumers and producers.

The minister said the study is needed because of the federal government's approach to supply management and support of more national boards.

The image of farming and marketing boards has been distorted by adverse publicity and a lack of information reaching consumers, he said.

He said depressed markets and high production costs are the main problems facing B.C.'s farming industry.

The new minister said he has developed a basic five-point program for the industry that includes:

—Adequate protection against imports;

—Improved marketing and advertising for B.C.-produced foods;

—Development of new markets;

—Improved efficiency of farm operations and;

—Programs to encourage younger people to farm.

"I intend to press for better protection of our farm products from foreign imports," he said. "I cannot rationalize why the federal government does not give us better protection at the border."

Hewitt said the federal government should institute a time tariff on food imports so that locally-produced products can mature and not face depressed prices in the market place at the time of harvest due to oversupply from elsewhere.

He will be discussing the federal government's tariff philosophy with agriculture minister Eugene Whelan, he added.

$13.5M Tab on Buildings Work

An emergency program started three years ago to renovate deteriorating parts of the legislative buildings could cost $13.5 million, says architect Mac Lewis.

The program syarted under the former New Democratic Party administration with an estimated cost of $5 million. So far, $8 million has been spent.

Lewis and his work crews are trying to get the major work completed before the next session of the legislature, expected early in 1977.

William Hartley, former public works minister, said the work was essential to repair leaky roofs, shore up foundations and prepare adequate office space for cabinet ministers.

A large part of the renovation and re-organization program involved the ultimate location of all cabinet ministers in the main legislative building. Under the W. A. C. Bennett Social Credit administration, ministers were scattered throughout the legislative precinct.

Along with the relocation plan came reconstruction of ministerial offices, a facet of the project which ran into heavy critical fire from the then-Social Credit opposition.

Ministerial offices, especially the premier's west wing suite, now are coming under fire from the NDP opposition which is criticizing costs.

NDP leader Dave Barrett says the premier has installed such luxuries as a private shower in his new suite of offices.

He has, but Lewis says it is the only extra requested by the premier.

Another charge by Barrett is that his old office renovated at the time of his takeover, is being renovated again.

Lewis says that is true — to an extent.

He says that, before Barrett moved in, he requested changes to accommodate his staff. That work, says Lewis, was carried out quickly and left undone a lot of work required for restoration.

Lewis also says that ministerial offices are being redone and re-furnished "for a ministry, not for individual ministers."

The architect adds that the most costly items in the program are the ones the public will never see.

Electrical work, fundation drainage, waterproofing, fire retardant paint for attics and replacing the roof tiles are among the costly items.

Another item under the renovation plan is moving the press gallery from its 87-year-old spot to new quarters in the old legislative dining room. A new dining room will be built in the basement of the main building.

The huge project now is 85 per cent complete and is expected to be finished in early 1977.

Is it worth it?

"To me, the building is the No. 1 architectural historical monument in British Columbia," Lewis says. "It's worth spending the money on."

CONFIDENT BENNETT SEES PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett met Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday to discuss several economic issues, including federal-provincial agreements to help develop his province's coal industry.

Bennett described the one-hour meeting as "very rewarding. I'm not prepared to announce anything today either positively or negatively."

Bennett expressed confidence that his province has markets for coal, citing Mr. Trudeau's recent trip to Japan and a similar sales pitch to that country from his own energy minister.

There are still agreements to be made between the federal and B.C. governments that would govern transportation systems-railways in particular—to ship the coal. For both his government and the federal side, such agreements are "very complex."

They could not be solved in one meeting, he said, noting this discussion had a long history.

Premier Bennett also said he was looking forward to the first ministers' meeting later this month.

It is business as usual in B.C. despite the election of the separatist Parti Quebecois government in Quebec two weeks ago, he said. His government was not concerned that Quebec would steal the spotlight from the other provinces at the meeting.

"You've already got proof that he (Trudeau) is willing to spend over an hour with B.C., while everyone else is preoccupied with Quebec," he said.

He said the federal system brings the country together while allowing flexibility in the powers of various levels of government.

Ferry Funds Ruled Out By Curtis

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis says he won't consider funding for a ferry to carry schoolchildren between Protection Island and Nanaimo — a three quarters of a mile trip.

Nanaimo city council had been trying for several weeks to convince the ministry to provide a grant to support the ferry service.

Leeshore Resorts on the island operated a private ferry system for years but increasing insurance rates forced them to stop earlier this month. About 18 students regularly make the trip to the city.

Curtis said in a letter to Mayor Frank Ney that the province should not be expected to subsidize the ferry or make available a special grant to the city.

"If there is to be a publicly-funded support program, it will have to be considered at either the municipal, regional or school district level," he said.

Assistance from the municipal affairs ministry had been sought because Protection Island is within the Nanaimo city limits.

As of last week, special arrangements had been made by the Nanaimo school board to provide a ferry but it is not known how long that arrangement will continue.

Street Extension Apologies Made

Apologies were in order Tuesday when the abashed lands, planning and housing committee of Saanich was told it had failed to keep residents informed on the proposed westerly extension of Feltham.

"I must apologise for not keeping in touch with you and advising your group of what was happening," chairman Ald. John McDonald told a group of Brodick Crescent residents, adding the decision to extend Feltham was made in April.

"We were promised by this committee on several occasions that we would ke kept informed on plans for the extension," Murray Galbraith of 1565 Brodick told the committee. "We are bitterly disappointed to learn that council has decided on the route without first talking to us."

McDonald told the residents the road would probably not be built for eight to 10 years but Mayor Ed Lum said traffic requirments could force it to be built a lot sooner.

The committee assured the residents that the strip between their homes and the proposed extension would remain treed.

Asked if he would prefer a house, rather than a road, be built near his property, Galbraith replied:

"Homes don't have sirens and go by in the middle of the night."

Brother Strangled

HANNOVER, West Germany (AP) — A 16-month-old boy was strangled Tuesday when his three-year-old brother tied a cord around his neck, looped it over a door handle and pulled, police said. The infant was discovered hanging on the door by the mother when she returned from shopping. She had left the children unattended.

Bribery Probe By Rayonier

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rayonier Canada Ltd. is conducting an internal investigation following allegations in a B.C. Supreme Court civil action of bribes and kickbacks in business dealings between the forest industry giant and a small Surrey company making fence products.

A Rayonier lawyer confirmed Tuesday night an investigation is in progress and said RCMP commercial fraud investigators are also making a probe.

He denied that anyone at Rayonier had been fired but refused comment on reports that a number of employees, including management personnel, had been suspended.

"The company is making its own internal investigation and my understanding is that someone here has been talking to the RCMP," he said. "There have been no dismissals as a result of the investigation.

"I should point out that the company has not determined there actually were kickbacks at this stage. The company is now in the process of investigating that possibility."

The case came to light as the result of a complicated civil action involving the sale of the Surrey plant in August, 1975, for $400,000.

Plaintiff in the action is Almondgrove Holdings Ltd. of Vancouver, formed last year by chartered accountant Ernst Bauer of Richmond and Surrey realtor Eleonora J. Anderson to buy the manufacturing plant.

The defendants are brothers Ernest and Walter Schillinger and their network of companies: Baytree Industries Ltd. formerly known as Yar-Cedar Products Ltd., and Totem Forest Products Ltd.

Almondgrove claims its principals had no idea of kickbacks and bribes involved in obtaining cedar shorts, used in producing fencing products, until after it took over the operation.

"In order to obtain supplies of lumber, the plaintiff discovered that it was necessary and had been the practice of (the defendants) to offer bribes and kickbacks to employees of the companies which supplied the business with lumber," says the statement of claim.

"The amount of such bribes and kickbacks were not included in the cost of supplies as represented in the financial statements" supplied to Almondgrove before the sale.

Craigdarroch Recital Tonight

Concerts presented by the Conservatory of Music at Craigdarroch Castle this week include a senior student recital tonight at 8.

The young artist is Linda Gould, pianist, who will offer works by Bach, Haydn, Chopin, Bartok, Debussy and Franck. There is no admission charge for this event but donations may be made to the scholarship-bursary fund.

A faculty recital will be given Friday at 8 p.m. when clarinetist Larry de la Haye, cellist Rolf Gilstein, and pianist Mary Ducker present a program of music by Alan Ridout, Don Banks, Glinka and Brahms.

Admission to this concert is $2.

Organ Recital Tonight

The second organ recital in a winter series at Shawnigan Lake School will take place tonight at 8 in the school chapel.

Organ soloist is Herman Bergink and the program will include Strathcona Lodge School's girls' choir directed by Sheila Sartini and six students from Frona Colquhoun's Suzuki Violin studio in Victoria.

Music with a Christmas flavor by Bach, Handel, Vaughan Williams and Dutch composers will be performed. Admission is free.

No Blame in Elevator Death

A coroner's jury Tuesday ruled "misadventure" and attached no blame in the death of an 11-year-old boy who suffocated in an elevator shaft Nov. 10.

Lorne Smith of 516 Constance died of asphyxia when he became wedged between the elevator and the shaft wall in the Admiral Court apartments, 1315 Esquimalt Rd.

He was playing a game with two other boys that coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre likened to stepping into a cage with a live boa constrictor.

One boy operated the elevator while the other two clung to a bar underneath the cage riding up and down.

The jury of four men and two women recommended an alarm system be hooked into the emergency stop buttons on all automatic passenger elevators in B.C.

The jury had been told earlier by labor department inspector Andrew Davis that such a safety system will be mandatory on all elevators. He couldn't say when.

The Smith boy's companions — Ronald Legeri and Michael Kohl — said Kohl was operating the elevator and the other two boys were under the cage when it stuck between the basement and the first floor.

The Smith boy then climbed between the cage and the shaft.

But apparently someone on another floor pushed the button and the elevator moved, trapping the boy.

It took police, ambulance attendants and an elevator crew 35 to 40 minutes to free him.

He was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

The two boys testified the three of them entered the building through an insecure garbage area door. On previous occasions they had gained entry by ringing buzzers and passing themselves off as newspaper boys.

St. Jorre reminded the jury the boys had entered the building illegally and might have been considered guilty of juvenile delinquency.

COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO BILINGUAL AIR TRAFFIC SERVICES IN QUEBEC

NOTICE OF HEARING AND SUBMISSION OF BRIEFS

By Order-in-Council P.C. 1976-1588 dated June 28, 1976, the undersigned have been appointed Co-Commissioners:

to inquire into the safety of the introduction of bilingual IFR Air Traffic Services in the Province of Quebec, and report upon the implications in relation to aviation safety, implementation costs and operational efficiency, and upon the procedures (and methods of their development) being developed by the Department of Transport in conjunction with the aviation associations and the aviation industry, and also upon such other matters as might influence the further introduction of bilingual Air Traffic Services in Quebec, and, without restricting the generality of the foregoing, to consider, evaluate and report upon

(a) the parameters of a procedural study to be conducted by the Department of Transport based on the use of an air traffic control electronic similator;

(b) the documentation required pertaining to the various procedures developed in order to facilitate evaluation of those procedures;

(c) the detailed conduct of the Department of Transport's studies and participation therein of representatives of the aviation industry and associations by monitoring, as appropriate, through specially appointed professional advisers if considered necessary, and by means of interim recommendation to the Department of Transport, the aviation industry and associations;

(d) the IFR procedures finally developed, and the VFR flight operations in Dorval and Mirabel Terminal Radar Service Areas, and St. Hubert Control Zone, in terms of the adequacy of the method used in developing and testing the procedures and the implications in relation to aviation safety, implementation costs and operational efficiency; and

(e) relevant matters that may in the course of the inquiry arise or develop and that, in the opinion of the Commissioners, should be included in the report.

Pursuant to its mandate, the Commission proposes now to hold public hearings into the following:

Introduction of bilingual VFR flight operations at Mirabel International Airport, Dorval International Airport, St. Hubert Airport and in the Montreal Terminal Radar Service Area.

The Department of Transport, aviation associations, the aviation air carrier industry and other interested persons are invited to submit information or views as to this specific issue. Submissions must be in writing, and are to be filed with Marcel Richard, Executive Director, at the Commission's office on or before January 3, 1977. A submission shall contain the following:

(a) the name, address and telephone number of the persons making the submission;

(b) a full statement of the information or views being submitted, in 10 copies. All sources of data must be clearly indicated. As many appendices and supporting data as required may be attached to the submission;

(c) the signature of the person making the submission.

A submission that does not comply with these provisions will not be accepted for filing. All submissions that are properly filed will be available for inspection at the office of the Commission.

The Department of Transport has submitted to the Commission a copy of reports entitled "St. Hubert Project Team Report, November 8, 1976" and "St. Hubert Bilingual Task Force, May, 1976." These reports are available for inspection at the office of the Commission.

The Commission will hold public hearings into this issue commencing at 10:00 o'clock on the 17th January, 1977, in Montreal at the Windsor Hotel.

There will be a public organizational meeting on 10th January, 1977, in relation to the manner of conducting the public hearings. Notice of the time and place of the organizational meeting will be provided to each person filing a submission to this Commission.

All inquiries and communications with the Commission or Commissioners should be addressed to the Executive Director, Marcel Richard, at the Commission's office:

UNIVERSE BUGGED

DALLAS (AP) — The United States will set scientists to work in about two years to listen for possible messages from other worlds, an engineer says.

"You have to be a bit presumptuous in this field," Bob Edelson of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasedena, Calif., said Monday. "But we have to assume that any signals we pick up were sent for detection."

Edelson told a national telecommunications conference here that he is one of several engineers and deep space scientists who will begin listing for extraterrestrial communications in the fall of 1978.

He said U.S. technology is capable of sending messages into deep space but any reply would take up to 24,000 years. Therefore, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has decided to keep quiet and listen.

"It is likely that communication between different species exists today," he said, adding that "lifesights," or stars suspected of harboring the elements necessary to sustain life, existed for five billion years before our sun was born.

The space nvestigations will be conducted by Ames Research Centre in Mountainview, Calif., and the Pasadena laboratory.

CIA Trained Rebels For Soviet States

WASHINGTON — A former chief of covert operations for the Central Intelligence Agency says the U.S. gave paramilitary training to Eastern European volunteers for intervention in potential national uprisings in Hungary, Poland and Romania in 1956.

James Angleton, head of special operations and counter-intelligence in 1956, said in an interview the agency began training hundreds of Eastern Europeans after one of his operatives obtained a text of the secret speech in which Nikita Khrushchev denounced Stalin's crimes before the 20th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party in February, 1956.

Angleton said his superior, the late Frank G. Wisner, then director of clandestine services, perceived the speech as a tool for fostering nationalist position to Soviet rule in Eastern Europe.

"Having the document gave us enormous advantage to organize and update those operational groups which were authorized in 1950," he continued, referring to a directive that established the agency's covert political-action arm, the Office of Policy Co-ordination, with an authorization for paramilitary operational groups to be used "with a view of never accepting the status quo of Soviet hegemony."

Wisner and Angelton promoted "vast preparations for refurbishing operational groups," anticipating the Khrushchev speech "would be a thunderbolt not only to the international Communist movement, but to sovereign Communist states," Angleton related.

The Eastern Europeans, largely from Hungary, Poland and Romania, with some from Czechoslovakia, were trained at a secret installation in West Germany by CIA paramilitary specialists, he said.

Freighter Sinks In Storm

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A 311-foot cargo ship sank in the Gulf of Mexico today, forcing 25 crew members into lifeboats and a rescue effort amidst darkness and choppy seas.

The Melias, a 3,372-ton Liberian freighter with a cargo of 4,000 tons of bauxite, began taking on water Tuesday eveing about 300 miles due east of Tampico, Mexico.

The crew abandoned ship early today because it began to break up, according to coast guard officials.

The ship sank at 5:15 a.m. in 12,000 feet of water.

The men jumped into two lifeboats from the Melias and two life rafts dropped from a circling coast guard plane.

"There shouldn't be any problems," said coast guard spokesman Jim Morrison.

Rare Flock of Birds Blocks Bulldozers

WASHINGTON — By edict of the Supreme Court, the Mississippi sandhill cranes, all 40 of them, will continue to live in peace.

The court Monday refused to review an appeals court decision that held the dwindling flock of birds should be spared the intrusions of a federal interstate highway interchange in Southern Mississippi.

The ruling satisifed bird-lovers, made Mississippi mad, and left a long gap in Interstate Highway 10, where the interchange was supposed to go until the cranes' friends came along and went to court.

The suit marked the first time that a tough 1973 statute designed to save endangered species of fish and wildlife had gone all the way to the Supreme Court. It is expected to encourage a number of other litigants trying to protect fish, bats, crocodiles and other things from federal bulldozers digging dams and highway lanes.

The Mississippi sandhill crane, a subspecies of the sandhill crane species, once flourished across the Southern United States. The non-migrating subspecies is now down to only about 40 birds living in a marshy area of Jackson Country, Miss.

Pesticide Plant Workers Stricken by Paralysis

By PETER MILIUS
Washingt Post

WASHINGTON — Federal investigators have fund what one describes as "possibly another Kepone" situation—an unusual and alarming concentration of nerve disease among past and present workers in a small Texas pesticide plant.

At least two workers have suffered partial paralysis. A company description of one says: "At the time of his release from the hospital, he was able to walk with the assistance of double leg braces and walking canes."

A description of the other says: "He still cannot walk."

Other employees are said to have complained of such symptoms as salivation, sweating, vomiting, "an inability to swallow," sleepiness, dizziness, blurred vision, "a choking sensation" and, in a number of cases, ataxia—a general failure of muscular co-ordination.

The symptoms of at least two employees have been such that they have been diagnosed as having multiple sclerosis. Three others have been diagnosed as having encephalitis.

The pesticde plant in Bayport, near Houston, is owned by Velsicol Chemical Corp. From 1971 through January of this year, it manufactured a nerve-attacking chemical called leptophos.

Leptophos, sold by the company under the brand name Phosvel, has never been licensed for use in the U.S. Velsicol has been able to sell it only abroad.

Phosvel is heavily used in Egyptian cotton fields. In 1971, Phosvel's first year of heavy use in Egypt, hundreds of water buffalo there were stricken with a strange nerve disease that often included paralysis of the hindquarters. A reported 1,200 to 1,300 of the huge draft animals died.

Velsicol issued a statement Tuesday night in respone to a request for comment on the leptophos issue, noting that "manufacturing operations were discontinued in early 1976." The company stopped leptophos production voluntarily, and now produces another pesticide at the Texas plant.

The full extent of the problem in Texas—how many workers have been affected, how severely—is still unknown. The plant has fewer than 100 employees, but more than 100 others worked there at one time or another in the 10 years Velsico has owned the production site.

The few case histories the investigators have seen are enough to convince them that some of the leptophos workers have been poisoned.

"You just don't find, going into a plant that size, such severe neurologic symptons as these just by chance," said Joseph K. Wagoner, a Cincinnati-based biostatistician who is head of field studies for NIOSH, an agency of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Leptophos is a complicated chemical called an organophosphate. It kills pests by destroying their nervous system, mainly by inhibiting the activity of cholinesterase, without which the nervous system cannot function properly.

But Leptophos and a few other organophosphates — prized as pesticides because they break down relatively quickly, rather than lingering in the environment or on food — also affect the nervous system in a second way, according to researchers.

That is, they eat away a kind of sheathing around the nerves called myelin. This, too, produces all kinds of physical incapacities, and is not reversible.

People with multiple sclerosis sometimes show signs of myelin destruction. So have some Velsicol workers, according to NIOSH investigators.

In 1974 the Velsicol firm applied for and was granted tolerances for the use of leptophos by the Environmental Protection Agency — a first step in the complicated process by which pesticides are cleared for use on foodstuffs in the United States. The tolerances granted were for use of the pesticide on lettuce and tomatoes.

EPA developed doubts about the lettuce and tomato tolerances even as it issued them (Tolerances are limits on the amount of pesticide that can remain on a product when it is marketed.) The environmental agency thus ordered further research, a spokesman said Tuesday and in May 1975, announced its intention to revoke the leptophos tolerances.

The company, according to a chronology put together by NIOSH investigators, had begun to call in medical consultants in the spring of 1975, after production of leptophos had been stepped up at the Bayport plant and a number of workers had showed various signs of sickness.

The case histories and other material assembled by these doctors were given to the advisory committee last August.

EPA formally revoked the lettuce and tomato tolerances last month.

ATOMIC LOBBY CALLED 'HUCKSTER'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Common Cause, the public interest lobbying organization, charged today that the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy was a "huckster for the nuclear power industry" and should be abolished.

In issuing a 30-page report, Common Cause President David Cohen said the committee "provides a platform to nuclear power supporters while it rarely hears the critics and never listens to them.

"It ignores safety issues and cost overruns while it protects federal investments in its members' states and districts. It is the classic special interest committee to the nth power."

Common Cause said the powers now held by the 18-member panel, headed by retiring Sen. John O. Pastore (Dem-R.I.) should be given to House and Senate committees that are responsible for U.S. energy policies.

Canadian Gas Line Favored

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pipeline through Canada is environmentally the best of three competing proposals to transport Alaska natural gas to the lower states, according to a study by the U.S. Federal Power Commission.

Neither the staff nor the commission, however, has made a final recommendation on which pipeline proposal is best when economic and other factors are considered.

The FPC is considering pipeline applications from Arctic Gas, El Paso Natural Gas Co., and Northwest Pipeline Corp. with two Canadian partners, for three different gas transportation systems.

Arctic Gas and Northwest's Alcan Project envisage pipelines from Alaska's North Slope across parts of both Alaska and Canada. The pipelines follow different routes.

El Paso proposes to build a gas pipeline parallel to the trans-Alaska oil pipeline now nearing completion to southern Alaska and then branching off to a port where the gas would be liquified and shipped out in tankers to the U.S. west coast.

"Much to the chagrin of the applicants," says the report submitted to the commission on Nov. 19, "staff finds that all three Alaskan pipeline proposals have undesirable aspects."

The staff said the best alternative environmentally would be its own recommended pipeline route down Alaska and across Canada along the Alaska Highway. Nobody has applied to build such a pipeline.

STEEL PRICE INCREASE 'PREMATURE'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The agency that monitors inflation for the White House says the steel industry's 6 per cent price increase on flat-rolled products, which went into effect today, "may have been a bit premature."

William Lilley, acting director of the council of wage and price stability, said Tuesday the steel industry is "laying people off (and) shutting down furnaces."

The spokesman said the report, which he termed "interim," was pulled together from information submitted by the steel companies and other materials collected by the council.

Surgery Unnecessary?

WASHINGTON (WP) Aetna Life and Casualty, one of the main U.S. health insurers, on Jan. 1 will start offering its 125,000 Washington-area subscribers another doctor's opinion on suggested non-emergency surgery, without extra charge.

Aetna will begin what a spokesman Monday called "a two-year experiment in trying to cut health costs by eliminating unneeded surgery" despite refusal of the D.C. Medical Society to co-operate.

"This does not mean our members won't take part as individual surgeons and doctors," said Dr. Thomas Curtin, medical society president. "We've always encouraged patients to get a second openion if there's any question.

"But we did not want to be ion if there's any question.

"But we did not want to be involved in this project as a society. We're not so sure the study's idea that there is a lot on unnecessary surgery that can be eliminated — is valid.

All those studies are based on the experience of some New York City unions that were first to report that when they required their members to get a second opinion before an elective — or non-emergency — operation, the total number of operations was cut by 16 to 17 per cent.

Some critics have estimated that as much as one-fourth of all surgery done in the U.S. is unneeded. Defenders of surgery have said the figure is as low as 1 per cent.

Ice Age Caused By Orbit Change

NEW YORK(AP) — The great ice ages of the last half-million years were caused by changes in the earth's orbit around the sun, scientists said Monday.

Scientists from Columbia, Brown and Cambridge Universities said they determined with certainty that cyclical changes in the shape and tilt of the earth's orbit and seasonal position were the fundamental cause of the ice ages.

Dr. James Hays of Columbia's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory said proof of this finding was in the precision with which measurements of ice age time, as indicated in cores taken from the ocean floor, matched the known cycles of changes in the earth's orbital tilt, shape and wobble.

He said this means the natural trend of climate during the next 20,000 years will be toward "extensive northern hemisphere glaciation and cooler climates."

"As the cooling trend continues, it will accelerate. It will accelerate when the ice begins to accumulate and that could take place maybe even in the next thousand years."

He said the cooling trend is long-term and it might get a little warmer before it gets cooler.

"In the last million years, only 10 per cent of the time has it been as warm as it is now. We are now on the downside of the present warm interval."

He said the effects of human activity on climate still are largely unknown.

The research is contained in the issue of Science magazine to be released Friday. Reporting with Hays are Dr. John Imbrie, an oceanography professor at Brown, and Dr. Nicholas Shackelton of Cambridge in England.

"We are certain now that changes in the earth's orbital geometry caused the ice ages," the scientists said. "The evidence is so strong that other explanations—variations in solar radiation, the earth's magnetic poles, etc.—must now be discarded or modified."

The work confirms a theory put forth in the 1920s by Milutin Milankovich, a Yugoslavian geophysicist, but never widely accepted or disproved.

Extensive analysis of data gathered by an international effort called CLIMAP (Climate: Long-Range Investigation Mapping and Prediction) during the last six years made confirmation of his theory possible, Hays said.

In doing this, the scientists assembled "an uninterrupted record of the earth's climate dating back 450,000 years, three times further than science had gone before.

Prison Building Boost Planned

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Solicitor-General Francis Fox expects to announce shortly a "significant acceleration" of new prison construction, he said Tuesday night.

He told the commons justice committee the present five-year program, in which 24 institutions are to be built, may be compressed to three years.

A major goal would be to close the old British Columbia penitentiary at New Westminster and others like it across the country.

Pentitentiaries Commissioner Andre Therrien told Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster) a decision has not been made on whether to rebuild the east wing of the B.C. Penitentiary, destroyed Sept. 27 by prisoners.

The decision appears to hinge on estimates now being made of how early prisoners can be moved to a new medium-security prison at Mission and whether the number of men being sentenced to prison in the province increases or decreases.

Surrey council, meanwhile, has decided it does not want a maximum security prison constructed in Hazelmere but is still willing to discuss with the federal government the building of a major complex which includes a penitentiary.

Council last May approved in principle the construction of a penitentiary complex which included accommodation for 192 prisoners, a rehabilitation centre, an RCMP training college, and a prison officers' training centre.

Since then, the Canadian Penitentiary Service proposed to put a maximum security prison in Surrey but no further mention was made of a larger complex.

Mayor Ed McKitka said the other facilities would be built later on and that the prison was merely the first phase.

He urged council not to reject the proposed prison until a complete presentation had been made by the federal government.

U.S. Paper Fanning Quebec Flames

NEW YORK (CP) — An article in Barron's, a popular Wall Street weekly newspaper, claiming that Quebec is on the road to socialism under Premier Rene Levesque has raised the ire of the new Parti Quebecois government.

Four years ago, the paper raised hackles in British Columbia when it said that the election of the NDP had turned that province into "the Chile of the North."

A Quebec government official said here Tuesday that the article was little more than a hodge-podge of old statements and comments by Levesque before the PQ came to power Nov. 15 and gave a disorted picture of what really are his policies and the province's future.

The article was written by John D. Harbron of Toronto, foreign affairs analyst for Thomson Newspapers in Canada.

It implies that from what Levesque has said in the past, U.S. companies with branch plants in Quebec can expect to face a greater measure of government control and take-over.

The Quebec official, after discussing the article with the office of Rodrigue Tremblay, Quebec's new minister of industry and commerce, said it was an unfair and slanted assessment of the new government.

Harbron write that Quebec now is "on the brink of Canada's latest and most determined socialist experiment."

The Quebec official, however, said that Tremblay already has emphatically stated that the new government would favor any project which has a high employment input and emphasized that it has no plans for nationalization.

Tremblay also denied, the official said, that the Quebec government has any "socialist tendencies."

Harbron said in his article that the Parti Quebecois economic manifesto, published in 1973, calls for joint labor-management control of big business and is replete with such phrases as "democratization of the economy" and a "national investment code."

All this must be implemented before any referendum is taken on separation, Harbron said. From time to time in the past, Levesque has "sounded Castro-like in what he thinks of some multinational companies with substantial Quebec holdings and how he will treat them," he wrote.

"In early 1971, for example, he said that some kinds of industry would be nationalized 'practically overnight.'"

Harbron asserted that since the PQ manifesto appeared financial institutions which might be affected have taken the message as "gospel" and moved money market trading desks, small loan operations and even entire head offices out of Montreal.

The Quebec official said the new government wants to do everything it can to encourage new investment especially from Wall Street, "where the money is."

He noted that a major top proposal of the Quebec government is to declare the area around Montreal's Mirabel airport a tariff-free port to encourage investment.

Tremblay said in Montreal last Sunday that he wants to discuss such a proposal with his federal counterpart, Jean Chretien.

Industries drawn to Mirabel to transform raw materials would not have to pay any tariffs on re-exported finished products, Tremblay said.

The Wall Street Journal said the Barron's story was among the negative factors in a spate of commentary on the demise of the Canadian dollar.

It quoted one foreign exchange dealer as saying that the article would not help the Canadian dollar.

Defections Denied By Whip

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Reports of defections within the Liberal caucus that could wipe out the government majority in parliament are "greatly exaggerated," Joe Guay, minister without portfolio and chief government whip, suggested this week.

Over the weekend it was reported that three Quebec Liberal MPs were on the verge of quitting the caucus to sit as independents. This would have wiped out the Liberal's majority reducing the Liberals to 132 members in the 264-seat house.

Sherbrooke's Le Tribune reported Serge Joyal (L — Maisonneuve-Rosemont), Pierre De Bane (L — Matane) and Claude Tessier (L — Compton) would resign from the caucus this week.

Guay said he had received no information that the three members from Quebec were preparing to quit the caucus.

The senior editor of Le Tribune Gilles Dallaire, said his information came from Montreal sources close to the Liberal party but he acknowledged that since his story had appeared Joyal and De Bane had told him it was not correct, that they were not ready to leave the caucus at the moment.

There is a great deal of dissatisfaction within the caucus over bilingualism.

New Role for NATO Studied by Danson

OTTAWA — Defence Minister Barney Danson says he is considering a new or altered role for the 5,000 Canadian NATO troops in Europe.

He said in an interview Tuesday he could recommend after study that the number now serving there be increased. But he added that this might be too costly.

Danson also said he might recommend consolication of the Canadian role putting all its military eggs in Central Europe and giving up its present responsibility for assisting in the defence of Norway in an emergency.

Appointed in a cabinet shuffle last month, Danson adds that his thoughts need clarifying on this matter. He said he will be taking the first hard look at Canada's role in Europe since 1970 when the Canadian NATO strength was cut to 5,000 from 10,000.

At present the NATO commitment, about half army and half air force, are in reserve on the so-called central front. In case of an attack from Warsaw pact nations they would be reinforced from Canada immediately, bringing the Canadian brigade up to fighting strength.

In the Commons, Edmonton Centre MP Steve Paproski angrily accused Danson of political patronage in ordering the transfer of the Canadian Airborne Regiment from Edmonton to Petawawa.

Liberal MPs refused to give consent to a motion of Paproski's to direct Danson to reconsider the decision.

The defence minister had stated that the more than 1,000 men of the airborne regiment will be moved next summer — most of them to Petawawa and about 250 to Ottawa — and hinted the unit may be broken up.

Paproski argued that there was a lack of consultation with the city of Edmonton about the economic impact of the move and stated there will be large relocation costs for about 1,200 families involved in the transfer.

Peltier Appeal Off Until March

TORONTO (CP) — An appeal by Leonard Peltier, a leader of the American Indian Movement to the United Nations committee on civil and political rights cannot be heard until March at the earliest, the committee's only Canadian member said Tuesday.

Walter Tarnopolsky, a law professor, said the newly-estabished committee will not take office until Jan. 1.

Its organizational meeting, at which a chairman will be elected, is set for March. The committee's 18 members, each representing a country, were named in October.

Peltier lost an appeal to the Federal Court of Canada against his extradition to the United States where he is wanted on charges of murder in connection with the 1973 deaths of two FBI agents.

Meanwhile, AIM members continued today to occupy an office at the Royal Ontario Museum here and to keep in their care bones removed from Neutral Indian burial grounds at Grimsby, Ont.

Douglas Pine, who calls himself director of the Toronto chapter of AIM, said seven or eight Ontario members of the Indian group will continue the occupation, begun Tuesday, and keep the bones until settlement of a dispute over AIM's proposal to rebury the bones.

Museum officials told AIM three times Tuesday that the Indians would be allowed to rebury the bones, then refused three times to allow them to do so, Pine said.

He said that under proposals made Tuesday, museum officials and AIM members were to have driven to the burial ground, about 15 miles west of St. Catharines, Ont., with the bones.

Rental Car Patronage Row Brewing

OTTAWA (CP) — Jack Horner, Progressive Conservative transport critic, capped an angry wrangle with Transport Minister Otto Lang on Tuesday by demanding proof that politics played no part in awarding contracts to car rental firms at major airports.

Lang repeated a denial he made 10 days ago that politics was involved in the car rental contracts but the Crowfoot MP suggested different standards were used for judging bids by some car rental companies for booths in airports.

Horner accused Mr. Lang of being his "usual stubborn self" at the Commons transport committee meeting. Lang replied that Horner was distorting his words.

Horner suggested the transport department rulings on new contracts for car rental booths at airports actually cost the government money. But Lang rejected this view.

Escaper Sentenced To One Day

An 18-year-old escaped convict was sentenced in Victoria county court Tuesday to one day in jail consecutive to time he is already serving.

"I find it difficult to take a severe view of this matter," Judge E. J. C. Stewart said.

Christopher Ward Ingalls, 18, pleaded guilty to escaping from Jordan River camp March 30.

Court was told Ingalls was serving a one-year sentence for breaking and entering and theft, his first offence, and walked away from the camp eight days after his conviction. He was captured several hours later two miles east of the camp.

The judge, after hearing that Ingalls had spent the time since his recapture at Wilkinson Road jail, said "that's a form of punishment in itself."

Ingalls replied "yes" when Stewart asked him if he had learned a lesson and if Jordan River was better than Wilkinson Road.

Stewart said the court could not approve of Ingalls' escape "but the circumstances don't appear too terrible to me. I do believe you probably have learned your lesson."

DUNCAN PUSHES PLAN TO REPAY COMMUNITY

DUNCAN — An immediate start has been asked on a year-old plan to have law-breakers compensate the community instead of being jailed.

Cowichan Valley Justice Council says the Community Work Service Program only needs senior government money to hire a supervisor. All the program's details have been worked out.

The council was set up less than two years ago to identify the needs of the police, courts, legal services and corrections.

It has already been instrumental in having an alternative education program implemented in the local school system.

The program — designed to accommodate teenagers having difficulty learning in the regular educational setting — has received praise from all segments of the community.

Victim Shot in Back, Court Told

Malcolm Preston Cunningham was probably shot six times, three times through the back, with a 30-calibre rifle, B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria was told Tuesday.

David John Ross, 33, is accused of murder punishable by life imprisonment in the death "on or about Nov. 1, 1975" of Cunningham, 22, whose body was found near railway tracks just east of Humpback Road in Colwood Dec. 2, 1975.

The case is being heard before an assize jury and Mr. Justice Victor Dryer.

Pathologist Dr. Bruce Hay, who performed an autopsy on Dec. 3, 1975, said the body was in a moderately advanced stage of decomposition with 14 wounds, produced by six or seven missiles which penetrated through and exited from the body.

The wounds included the chest and back area, right lung, left lung, several fractured ribs, upper abdomen, liver, kidney and left arm and shoulder area.

Two wounds "might suggest" Cunningham was standing and chest wounds "suggest he might" have been lying down or stooped over.

The wounds through the lungs would have been fatal and, without medical attention, the wounds through the abdomen would also have been fatal, he said.

Asked how long the victim might have been dead, Hay said "this is very difficult to determine because so many factors affect it" but "I would suspect it would probably have been outside for several weeks."

Asked what might have caused the wounds, he said "my impression was they were caused by bullets."

He said a person with such wounds might have lived five or 10 minutes, possibly less, with three of the penetrating wounds, and with the lung wounds, might have died in a minute or two.

In cross-examination, he agreed that his time of death was a "guesstimate" because there were many factors affecting decomposition, such as temperature and moisture.

Asked whether there were six or seven missile penetrations, he said "I would think there were six wounds anyway" but a wound over the left index finger might have been from the same source as an earlier wound, or a separate penetration.

He said the skin was "too badly degenerated" to be certain if there had been drug use and he did not ask for tests.

Staff Sgt. Robert Skolrood, an expert in firearms indentification at the RCMP crime laboratory in Vancouver, said he received a fired, copper-alloy-jacketed bullet from RCMP Constable Wayne Dew who said he found "a piece of "apparent" lead and copper on the inside of Cunningham's jacket.

His conclusion was that the fired bullet was "consistent" with being 30-calibre and he outlined a number of rifles of this type.

Asked which rifle was the most probable, he said it was "closest" to a U.S. carbine M1 or M2 but the bullet could have been fired from any of a number of firearms he mentioned in court.

He found 11 holes in Cunningham's jacket "consistent with having been made by bullets." Three holes in the mid-back area were consistent with being entrance holes.

Asked how many shots were fired, he said "in my opinion there were six definite entrance shots in the jacket."

Dew agreed the area where the body was found is used as a firing range, into the hulks of old cars. He replied "no" when asked if he had heard of it being used as a target range at night.

He said he turned over to watchmaker Tom Haynes a watch which he first saw on Cunningham's left arm at about 1 p.m. Dec. 2, 1975, and which was stopped between 5:26 and 5:27 with the day showing as Monday and the number three.

Haynes testified there were three months in 1975 in which Monday, the third, occurred — February, March and November.

He tested the self-winding watch and found it ran 47 hours without movement. He said the time on the watch (which was 5:50 Monday the 3rd when he received it) was in the afternoon rather than the morning because when he moved the hands to midnight the calendar day changed.

If fully wound, this would take the watch back to the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 1. But if not fully wound, it might run for only a few hours, so winding activity might have ceased on the second or the third as well as the first.

The jury was excused late Tuesday while matters were to be considered by Dryer in court.

The Crown's case is being conducted by George MacMinn, assisted by Nicholas Lang. Ross is represented by Dermod Owen-Flood, assisted by Robert Higinbotham.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 24-year-old man charged Tuesday in Victoria provincial court with wilful damage changed his plea twice and Judge Blake Allan changed his mind on the sentence.

Terry William Johnston first pleaded guilty to causing $15 damage to a light fixture outside Harbour Towers, 305 Quebec, James Bay, on Aug. 13.

When he told the judge he had been swinging from one fixture to another and that "it was an accident," Allan reminded Johnston that the charge was "wilfully" damaging the fixture.

"Well then," Johnston said, "I plead not guilty."

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan then looked up the legal definition of the word wilful in the Canada Criminal Code and suggested the case be adjourned until the afternoon so that legal aid's duty counsel, William McCallum, could speak to Johnston.

When court reconvened in the afternoon, Johnston again changed his plea to guilty.

Allan ordered a conditional discharge for Johnston but immediately changed this to an absolute discharge, meaning Johnston will not have a criminal record because of the incident.

Johnston agreed with Allan that he should pay $15 to the hotel for the damage.

Linda Barnes, 24, William Oostland, 24, and Alfred Seguin, 33, all of 18 Bay Street, elected trial by judge and jury on a charge of robbery and had their preliminary hearing set for Dec. 10.

Sequin was remanded in custody, Oostland was unable to raise bail while Barnes was released by Allan on her own undertaking to appear.

The charges arose from an incident involving an 18-year-old delivery boy who was allegedly robbed of $139 and beaten.

Trace Lee Harris, 17, of no fixed address was remanded in custody until today on a charge of possession of heroin. She was charged Monday and was given until next Tuesday to seek legal counsel.

A man wanted for robbery in Edmonton was remanded in custody to await transportation back to the Alberta capital to face charges.

James Monkman, 28, of no fixed address, was arrested on an Edmonton warrant which dated back to January.

Allan granted prosecutor Mulligan's request that Monkman be held in custody until Friday to give Edmonton police time to send an escort.

Witch Doctors Are a Force to Be Reckoned With

Washington Post

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — The setting had probably not changed much in 500 years — the aging African decked out in Leopard and snake skins, feathers and beads, sitting cross-legged on the hard earth among mud and thatch huts.

His audience, reverent and silent, waited for the old man to speak, for the bones to talk, to give the answers to a series of problems ranging from stomach pains to broken hearts.

The man is just one of about 4,000 African witch doctors, spirit mediums diviners and herbalists in Rhodesia.

The modern-day influence of the "nganga," the African word for witch doctor, is best demonstrated in the fact that both the Rhodesian government and the guerrillas now waging war on Rhodesia from bases in Mozambique have used spirit mediums to gain support from rural blacks living in the war-torn border areas.

Spirit mediums in northeastern Rhodesia crossed into Mozambique in the early stages of the four-year guerrilla campaign, according to a government report. They conferred with the insurgents and then returned to organize Africans to provide food, shelter and hiding places for the guerrillas when they crossed over and were forced to live off the land.

The Rhodesians have countered by taking other spirit mediums into protected villages, the new army-defended emcampments near the border. There they urged Africans not to get involved, said a government spokesman.

Most Rhodesians, both black and white, take the subject of witch doctors seriously.

Some witch doctors, especially in Salisbury, claim they treat many Europeans who seek advice about their own problems and those of their African domestic servants and laborers.

The scene of the audience waiting for the witch doctor to read the bones is a common one. It reveals the continuing importance of the witch doctor even in a society like Rhodesia's that is dominated by European culture. The white man's means of treating problems have gained acceptance during the eight decades of European presence, but witch doctors and spirit mediums often still have the final word on what caused an injury or a personal dilemma.

A middle-aged clerk from Salisbury went to the witch doctor after having an infected cut treated at one of Rhodesia's modern hospitals. He had accepted the white man's cure. Now he wanted to know why he had suffered — had he offended an ancestor, evoked an evil spirit, been a victim of a spell?

A young housemaid, a church-going Christian, consulted him after conferring with her minister about the death of her child. She accepted the minister's advice. Now she wanted to know why she was victimized.

The "nganga" began his session sitting quietly. Suddenly he started to shake violently, then to belt like a mule, then to belch loudly and repeatedly, his wide-open eyes rolling.

It went on for 10 minutes before he settled down, the trance broken, ready to start business. He picked up the bones — a pile of shells, roots, cows' horns, vultures' beaks, a whistle and one die — shook, then threw them on the ground.

To those who sat on the ground around him, enthralled, he had all the answers. After all, who has more insight than a witch doctor?

European settlers early learned the importance of the witch doctor's influence. The arrival of an early white adventurer, Frederick Courtney Selous, was predicted a half century earlier by a spirit medium.

The legendary "nganda," Chaminuka, told his people that a light-skinned man who had no knees would come and save the Shona people from attacks by the rival Matabele tribe. Selous was the first white man seen by most of the tribespeople, and the explorer, wearing trousers, indeed had no knees in the eyes of the bare-legged Africans.

Selous dealt with the local populations through spirit mediums and witch doctors — and the relationship between the dominant whites and the black witch doctors and spirit mediums has grown steadily since then.

Today, Salisbury's herbarium is making a study of the roots and herbs used by witch doctors to determine their potential use. Many of Rhodesia's qualified physicians — including an estimated 75 black doctors — recognize that witch doctors can still be useful in handling African ailments.

A white physician, who asked not to be named, explained: "We often get cases where we can find absolutely nothing wrong with a patient, yet he or she obviously is in serious pain. Sometimes we will consult or bring in a witch doctor to see if the patient believes a spell has been cast or the spirits are angry. If so, the witch doctor takes over.

"It has happened a few times that the nganga will help the patient recover. I suppose it is due to what we would call psychology."

Give your family our best. Sour Cream.

WILL YOUR CAR BE STOLEN NEXT?

Car theft is not the exclusive domain of a few joyriding teenagers. It is a big, well-organized and profitable business in Canada. Last year, 10 cars were stolen every hour — or one out of every 100 registered. Just as alarming, 25 percent of those who had their cars stolen, never got them back! Knowing how thieves work could save you considerable money and anguish. The December issue of Reader's Digest presents an in-depth look at how car theft rings operate, how you can avoid having your car stolen, and how to make sure the car you buy isn't "hot". Butter balls—easy to make and they freeze well

There Are Three Variations To These Butter Ball Cookies

Mary Moore

At one session I have made Butter Ball cookies that can be adapted to three variations. The rich cookie lovers can use butter and nuts. The budget and cholestrol watchers can use margarine and bran flakes (surprisingly good). They freeze well so start your Christmas baking now.

The dough is easy to make in your mixer and when chilled is easy to shape.

BUTTER BALLS

1 c. hard butter (see variations below)
½ c. granulated sugar
2 egg yolks
2 tsp. (or 1½) almond extract
1⅞ c. stirred but unsifted all-purpose flour
½ c. bran flakes (see below)
½ c. finely chopped cashews or other nuts (see below)

Into beater bowl measure the butter and sugar and beat on "high" for five minutes until creamy. Add almond extract and egg yolks and beat again. Add flour and beat until thoroughly blended in. Divide dough in half and put half in small bowl. Into it stir the bran flakes. Into other half beat the nuts. Scrape down sides of bowls and chill dough one-half hour.

Grease two large cookie sheets (if teflon, greasing is not necessary). Between your palms shape dough into about 55 one-inch balls and place two inches apart on cookie sheets. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 14 to 17 minutes, switching pans in oven at halftime. Do not overbake. Cool on cake racks. If to be frozen, arrange on plastic or foil pans, cover and freeze then stack in cartons or tupperware boxes with sheets of wax paper between layers and put back in freezer.

Variations:

1) Use hard, good-quality margarine instead of butter.

2) Omit nuts and use one cup bran flakes in the whole batch of dough.

3) Top each ball with one-quarter glace red cherry or piece of candied peel or blanched almond.

4) If you are not going to freeze these butter balls they may be rolled in icing sugar.

5) Omit bran flakes and use one cup chopped nuts in whole batch.

FRUITED LEMON SNOW

Snow:

1 c. sugar
2 c. boiling water
¼ c. corn starch
¼ c. cold water
3 large or 4 medium egg whites
¼ c. lemon juice

Fruit:

Ripe papaya or sliced bananas or drained canned peaches or apricots or pitted black cherries or fruit of your choice

In a medium pot stir together the sugar and boiling water and bring to boil. Stir corn starch with cold water together to a smooth paste. Reduce heat under the boiling syrup and stir smooth paste into it until thick. (Be cautious for if heat is too high this will plop and splash up.) Remove from heat and cool a little, then stir in lemon juice.

Beat egg whites until stiff and fold in. Spoon some into your stemmed glasses to half fill. Cover generously with fruit of your choice, then fill to brim, piling "snow" up a little in a mound. Sprinkle with confetti-colored "sprinkles" just before serving or sprinkle with grated lemon rind and chill. Serves five or six.

May be made in advance.

Why Not Present Fish Like the Luxury It Is?

FOOD & nutrition

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Sadly, fish has become a luxury. Therefore, from time to time, why not treat it as a luxury and serve one of the great fish in a manner worthy of its price and stature?

SCALLOPS PROVENCALE
(Serves 8 to 10)

2½ pounds bay scallops
1 medium onion, minced
2 ribs celery, minced
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons vermmouth
2 tablespoons Pernod or other anise liquer
1 teaspoon dried tarragon, crushed
½ teaspoon fennel seed, crushed
1 clove garlic, minced
½ cup tomato paste
1 teaspoon lemon juice
salt and pepper to taste
1 cup creme fraiche
chopped parsley

Saute onion and celery in butter in a large frying pan or Dutch oven until softened. Add vermouth and boil down over high heat. Add Pernod and flame. When flame subsides, add scallops and turn with a slotted spoon until they turn white and become firm, about three to five minutes. Do not overcook.

Transfer scallops to a bowl with slotted spoon. Add herbs and garlic, and reduce liquid over high heat until syrupy. Add tomato paste, lemon juice, salt and pepper and return scallops. Pour in creme fraiche, stir and cook until hot but not boiling.

ARDENNES SALMON

1 fillet (10 ounces) salmon
2 tablespoons dry white wine salt
1 teaspoon finely chopped parsley vegetable oil
pinches of chipped garlic, thyme, bay leaf and savory
1 slice of lemon
freshly-ground pepper
2 slices bacon

For the sauce:

2 teaspoons finely chopped shallots
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Cut the salmon into two-inch slices and place them in a bowl with the wine, lemon slice and a little ground pepper. Marinate for one hour, then drain. Put aside marinade.

Wrap salmon in bacon. Oil a piece of aluminum foil large enough to fold around the salmon. Place salmon on half the foil. Sprinkle on garlic and herbs. Fold remaining foil over and seal packet tightly. Bake in a pre-heated 400-degree oven for 12 to 15 minutes.

While salmon is cooking, strain marinade into a saucepan. Add shallots and pepper to taste, plus a half-tablespoon of water. Reduce liquid by half over brisk heat. Turn off the heat and stir in butter, lemon juice and salt to taste.

Open foil case on plate before serving salmon. Present sauce separately.

TV Star Smothers Plants With Lots of Affection

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

We had the pleasure of spending a beautiful sunny afternoon sipping apple juice in Tommy Smothers' plant-filled patio as he shared, with us, his plant experience. Tom's TV image belies the gentle, intelligent man he truly is.

"My love of growing things came from my stepfather, an incredible gardener. We hung around the nursery on weekends. He was a camellia freak and he taught me all the names and I could identify them. I love to see my plants grow. I've seen them very sick, almost gone, then I'd do something, like wash the roots, trim the dead leaves, and after about two weeks when I return from the road, they'd be all better and sitting up like they were saying hello to me.

"I touch my plants a lot — that's as important as talking to them.

"Sometimes I'll spend time cutting off their bad parts and I know my touch comforts them. Maybe they get energy from me? I find it very peaceful to sit among my plants. They're very relaxing, and if they suffer, they do it in silence. My plants do take some concern, but love is caring.

"When I'm on the road, I have an elf come in to water and care for my plants. He knows how much they mean to me, so he does a good job, but my plants know the difference. They're always happy to see me when I return. The light in my apartment isn't that great and after a few weeks, they begin to look unhappy, so I put them outside on the patio and they sape up."

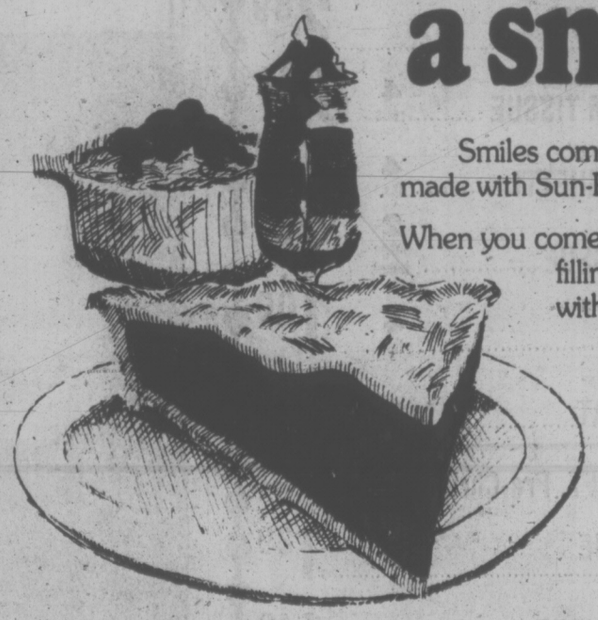
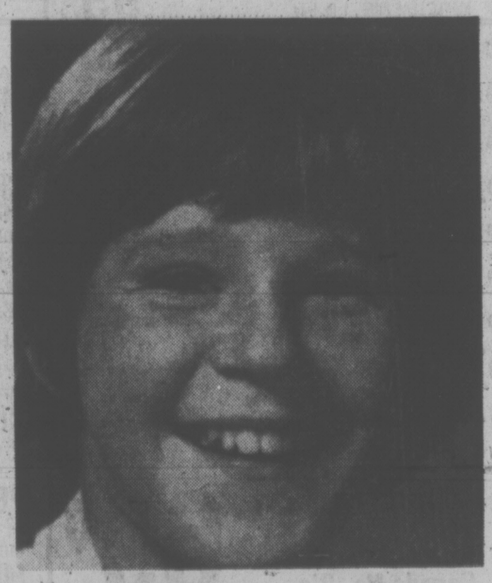
Sun-Rype Pie Fillings, flavour natural as a smile.



Smiles come easy when you treat your family to desserts made with Sun-Rype Pie Fillings.

When you come right down to it, what really matters in fruit fillings is the fruit. Sun-Rype Pie Fillings are made with the same famous 'B.C.' fruit you enjoy fresh — and the Sun-Rype people really know how to capture all the goodness and sunshine flavour of fresh fruit.



Sun-Rype Pie Fillings offer the best in convenience, too, because they are pre-cooked and ready to serve — quick and handy for pies, tarts, parfaits, and dessert toppings.

And there's a great choice — Apple, Cherry, Peach, Raisin and Blueberry — so there's no end to the variety of delicious fruit desserts you can serve your family all year round.

Sun-Rype Pie Fillings. Smiles ahead of all the rest.

Raw Peanuts Boast a Superior Flavor

hilda beastall

Peanuts in their natural unroasted, unsalted state have been known as satisfying food snacks at outdoor events such as country fairs and exhibitions for several generations. Then it was discovered that roasting and salting prevented development of insect infestation after harvesting and also delayed rancidity of the oil.

Thus peanuts can now be shipped great distances and stored with few losses.

However, the raw, unsalted nuts are available locally. Their flavor is superior, even when cooked for a few minutes in the many dishes which they improve in protein quality.

Quite a bit of research has been done on peanuts and peanut butter in the U.S. where they are an important export crop. They are rated as being high in good-quality protein, also having fat and calories enough to provide vitality when combined with other foods. Peanuts are considered in the same company as soy beans, lentils, dried peas and beans, for they are all legumes.

Not only is there a difference between raw peanuts and the roasted and salted, but in the kinds of peanut butter offered for sale. Locally you will find brands having salt, sugar, dextrose and monoglycerides n the list of ingredients.

If you have decided against adding more of these items to your food than already occur in a normal meal pattern, look for a brand which lists "Ingredients—Peanuts". It can be found on grocery shelves in all sizes from one-pound jars up to three-pound cans. There is nothing in the container except ground peanuts. This brand comes in plain (smooth) or crunch (bits of nuts) style.

Also, in this brand, the peanut oil will be found risen to the top of the jar or can. A day or two before heeding a new jar, open it, stir a little with a knife, replace lid firmly and invert container into a dish for safety if an oil leak should occur. Keep in refrigerator (to prevent oil from becoming rancid); if using from the small jar daily, reverse it each day at least until the peanut butter is completely mixed and without free oil. Other brands have stabilizers added to prevent the separation of oil.

A noticeable benefit from this unstabilized butter is that it does not leave a dryness in the mouth as do most other brands.

Peanut oil, as extracted when making peanut flour or meal, is highly regarded as a vegetable oil for cooking and salad dressing.

Both the meal and the flour are mentioned in a Columbia University nutrition book "Essentials of Nutrition" published back in 1940, and recipes occur in books around that date. While much as developed in this science during the 35 years between, the essentials were indeed laid out at that time, in great detail.

The peanut butter sandwich, using a good wholewheat bread, combined with cheddar cheese and green salad is a source of energy for youngsters and all who are active.

There are other ways to enjoy peanuts. Here is a fine flavored main dish which we call Nutburgers.

NUTBURGERS

2 Tbsp. oil or soft margarine
1 medium onion
2 canned tomatoes (drained)
1 medium apple peeled and chopped
¾ cup ground raw peanuts
¼ cup wheat germ
1 Tbsp. brewer's yeast (torula)
a little salt, thyme and curry powder
1 small egg, beaten
¼ cup milk from skim powder

Heat oil in frypan or skillet. Cook onion, tomatoes and apple until soft. Add remaining dry ingredients, mix well.

Beat egg in cup with fork, add part of milk. Then add to pan, stirring to mix into four stiff patties. Put in a little more milk if needed for moisture.

Cook on low heat for five minutes. Turn and brown on second side.

Serves four on homemade wholewheat buns or thick bread slices, with a green salad or a serving of cooked kale, cabbaget, or green beans.

PEANUT RISSOLES

¼ cup peanut butter
½ cup soy flour
½ cup wholewheat breadcrumbs
¼ cup wheat germ
½ cup cooked brown rice
2 Tbsp skim milk powder salt, paprika
1 tsp chopped onion
1 small egg
soft margarine or oil

Mix all ingredients except margarine. Form into four thick patties. Cook in frypan, in heated margarine or oil. Brown gently about eight minutes each side.

Serves four, with cooked kale and canned tomatoes.

Let Her Move In

DEAR ABBY: I am a widower, age 41, with two small boys, ages 6 and 11. My wife was killed three years ago in an auto accident and because I was driving, I needed professional help to get over the feeling of guilt.

I have recently hired a young babysitter to look after the house and boys. Her name is Maria and she is a very sensible, intelligent and mature 15-year-old.

Maria's mother, who has never been married, plans to marry next month. She came to see me and begged me to let Maria live in my home because her future husband refuses to have Maria live with them after they're married. She said Maria is willing to live with me. I said I would have to think it over.

Maria is a lovely girl, but she looks like a 20-year-old woman, if you know what I mean. I fear that if I let her live here, my reputation and hers might be ruined by evil-minded people. My parish priest advised me to take her in, and not to worry about evil-minded people. My mother-in-law, who is too old and sick to look after the boys, agreed with the priest.

The boys love Maria, and I must confess that I adore her in a fatherly way. Would I be inviting trouble to take Maria in? I have more than enough money to send her to college when the time comes. She wants to be a doctor. — MUST KNOW

DEAR MUST KNOW: Maria sound like a serious-minded, ambitious, intelligent girl. If you're certain that your attitude toward her is fatherly, don't worry about what evil-minded people think.

DEAR ABBY: Seems to me I've read a lot lately about people "dying" for a few minutes, coming back to life and living for years. I've begun wondering how many people have been buried alive, which has developed a fear in me that I might be buried alive one day. It's giving me nightmares!

Abby, who is supposed to make absolutely sure a person is dead before he's buried? The doctor or the mortician? — WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Most state laws require that a death certificate be signed by either a medical doctor or the county coroner, and the latter are being replaced in some states by "medical investigators," who must be licensed physicians. Relax. Your chances for being buried alive are zilch.

DEAR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN: Again it's come up in your column! I refer to the confusing business of the proper use of "Ms."

Why not just drop the Ms. Miss or Mrs., and simply address the person by name as I have done in addressing you? In this day of liberated womanhood and personal rights for everybody, why can't we be who we are without the gobbledegook of Mr., Ms., Miss or Mrs.?

The Mr., before a man's name is useless since it applies to both married men and single men. And to label a woman by her marital status is an invasion of her privacy. Whose business is it whether she's married, single or using the "Ms." to disguise one or the other? — FRANKLY FRANK

DEAR FRANK: Thanks for a sensible suggestion.

Pork Hocks With Cabbage

Pork may be purchased fresh, cured, smoked, fully cooked, canned and in ready-to-serve cuts. Today's pork is well trimmed so that retail cuts are fairly uniform. So whether you're cooking for family guests, or even weight-watchers, put pork on the menu.

Pork hocks being from the leg of the animal, contain shank bones, They may be sold fresh or pickled and are most commonly simmered or boiled. Tender juicy pork has a distinctive flavor that appeals to all, but they are especially tasty when served with cabbage or sauerkraut. Here is a recipe for pork hocks with cabbage:

PORK HOCKS WITH CABBAGE

4 pounds pork hocks (5 or 6 pork hocks)
Boiling salted water
¼ cup margarine
6 cups shredded cabbage (1 medium)
½ cup chopped onion
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 tablespoons vinegar
1½ cups diced, peeled apple.

Cover hocks with boiling, salted water. Simmer about two hours. Remove hocks and cube meat. Melt margarine, add cabbage, onion, seasonings and vinegar. Cover and cook slowly about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add meat and apple. Cover and cook, stirring occasionally until tender (about 20 minutes). 6 servings.

Add Sherry, Rum To the Bean Pot

Ingredients for special beans

At a recent buffet suppef, I found the baked beans to be very different and exceptionally good. The hostess told me the difference was she had added sherry and rum to the bean pot.

Most people who have only eaten the canned variety of beans, become rather surprised that such a fuss should be made over those baked in a crock. But there is a tremendous difference and home-made beans are a treat that is universally enjoyed.

In addition, home-baked beans are economical and very good for you.

There are a number of varieties of dried beans on the market, all of which can be used in the making of home-baked beans. The best type are the small white pea beans sold in cello packets at all the stores.

These beans contain a fairly high content of protein, thiamine and enough iron for an average serving to supply roughly half the body's daily needs in this important health-building mineral.

So, you see, baked beans are by no means a junk food but an excellent addition to one's diet. A 3½-ounce dry serving of beans contains 118 calories but this is by dry weight and since the beans swell considerably, this is far more than most people would use as a serving.

It used to be that all dried beans were started by soaking overnight, in a large quantity of water, to soften them up for the long cooking that followed. However a quick method has been devised that is superior and saves time.

Since home-baked beans need between 10 and 12 hours cooking in a slow oven, it is necessary to prepare fairly early and here's how it is done.

Wash or rinse two cups pea or navy beans, put them into a large pot and bring to a rapid boil. Hold at the boil for just two minutes, remove from the heat and leave covered for one hour and return to the heat, remove the lid and bring up to the simmer point again and hold there.

Since the beans soak up a lot of water, you may need to add some to cover and if so, do this from a boiling kettle.

After 10 to 15 minutes simmering, lift up a spoonful of beans and blow on them. When they are ready the skins will gently wrinkle. Now strain them, saving the water in which they were cooked. Pour the beans into a bean crock or any casserole dish that can be tightly covered.

Now we carry on with preparing the bean-pot.

JANET'S SPECIAL BEANS

Peel a small onion and push right down to the bottom of the beans. In a bowl or large measuring container, mix the following: one-third cup brown sugar, one tablespoon salt; 1½ teaspoons dried mustard, ½ teaspoon pepper, two ounces black molasses, two ounces maple syrup, two ounces sherry and two ounces dark sweet rum.

Stir this mix well and poke down into the surface of the beans four ounces salt pork cut in lengths and cover with the mix. There will be a sticky residue in the bowl so add a little hot liquid in which the beans were cooked, stir and repeat this, getting out all the mixture, until the beans are just covered with the liquid.

Seal tight with foil and a lid and place in a 250-degree oven for a minimum of eight hours, checking from time to time and, if necessary, topping the beans with the water saved from their cooking. If it is more convenient, you can allow the beans to stay in the oven as long as 12 hours but keep them topped with water and lower the heat to 200.

I have given this variation in timing because I often put a bean pot in the oven before we go out for the day and any number of times we have been late and they have been in fine shape. However, I always use the very thin narrow-necked bean pot which is superior to even the best casserole dish.

To finish off the beans, remove the top for the last 30 minutes and they will go a beautiful dark brown.

Care Still Is Needed with Vitamin E

eating right

By Ruth Fremes and Zak Sabry

In an earlier column, we said that we need about 10 milligrams of vitamin E each day, and we warned about the dangers of taking amounts of the vitamin far in excess of this nutritional requirement. Predictably, we received a lot of letters taking us to task.

Some pointed out that it's almost impossible to find vitamin E pills that offer only 10 units. Others repeated the counsel of Drs. Shute who advise massive doses of the vitamin.

We still say that all your body needs is about 10 milligrams of vitamin E each a day. And we still say that doses far in excess of this amount are potentially dangerous or at best useless. But to answer the two points raised in the letters we received:

First — the tablet size. It's true that there is no place we know of where anyone can buy 10-milligram tablets of vitamin E. But if you're eating a balanced diet, including foods like wheat germ that contain vitamin E, you're unlikely to need any supplement. If you're taking a multi-vitamin-mineral supplement, it probably gives you the proper quantity of vitamin E along with the other vitamins it contains.

Even if you're determined to take pure vitamin E, you can average the amount you take each day. Take one 100-milligram tablet every week or ten days. Because vitamin E is fat-soluble and not readily-eliminated in the urine, your body will retain it and use it as it's needed. And doses slightly above that 10-milligram requirement (which is based on the Canadian dietary standard) should cause you no concern.

Now, on to the overdose question. The enthusiasm for massive doses of vitamin E originated with the work of Drs. Evan and Wlfred Shute and Dr. Albert Vogelsang of London, Ont. In the late 1940's the Shute's announced great success in treating angina pectoris (chest pain associated with heart disease) with large doses of vitamin E. Duke University in North Carolina, Mount Sinai Hospital in New York and the University of Manchester Medical Centre in England all tried to duplicate the Shutes' reported results, with no luck. They were unable to find any evidence that the vitamin E therapy actually worked with heart disease.

The Shutes continue to claim near-miracle properties for the vitamin, and some of the vitamin manufacturers and some "health food stores" seem more than willing to cater to anyone who agrees with them. And so there are a growing number of Canadians who are taking hundreds of milligrams of the vitamin each day on the mistaken assumption that it will do everything from cure heart disease to ward off fatigue.

Overdoses of this quantity could be dangerous, first because people who believe vitamin E can help them overcome heart disease may put off consulting a doctor, but also because the vitamin itself can be harmful.

As we've mentioned, vitamin E is not soluble in water. As a result, it is not easily passed off by the body. But it is soluble in fat, and so it tends to accumulate in the fatty tissue under the skin and in some glands. It may well hinder proper glandular functioning.

Vitamins A and D have similar fat-soluble characteristics, and research shows that excessive doses of either can lead to illness and even death. As a result our federal health authorities have moved to limit the amounts of these vitamins available without a prescription. There have been no such steps taken yet with regard to vitamin E, but a wise consumer will limit his intake of this vitamin to the amounts he will get naturally in a balanced diet, or to supplements that are close to our real dietary requirement of about 10 milligrams a day.

And so, as we are saying, we need about 10 milligrams of vitamin E a day. Taking doses far in excess of that requirement violates the cardinal rule of nutrition: moderation.

There's No Shame In Having Epilepsy

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Our son, who is at college, has had attacks of epilepsy since chiuldhood. With medication, the epilepsy has been controlled. Yet he lives in terror that there will be a recurrence and that his classmates at college will abandon him. He insists on keeping his history secret. — Mr. and Mrs. J.R.D., Tenn.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. D.:

Thousands of people who are victims of epilepsy have made complete adjustments in their social lives.

With modern drugs, epileptic seizures can almost always be controlled. Nevertheless, there is a marked overlay of anxiety that an attack may again occur even with adequate treatment.

It is unfortunate that our son has not yet been able to recognize that there is no shame or stigma in having epilepsy. It is no greater reflection on him than an attack of pneumonia or a leg fracture.

It is only with maturity, attained with psychological support, that these people can reveal to friends and colleagues that epilepsy does exist.

I have been exposed to mumps. I hear that in an adult of my age (26) this can be dangerousl. How can I protect myself at this time? — Mr. A.R., Mich.

Dear Mr. R.:

The urgency of your letter made it necessary for me to write directly to you. I feel that other readers, too, should know that mumps in a male adult can be complicated by inflammation of the testicles (orchitis).

After a definite exposure, the early use of a special type of hyper-immune gamma globulin is needed to prevent mumps and its complications.

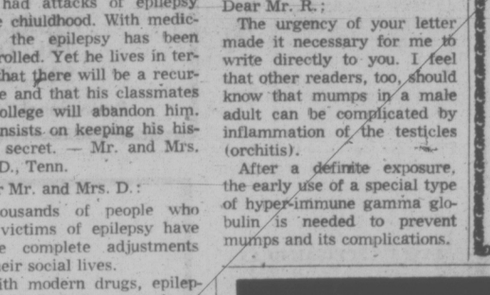
STOP!
STAY WHERE YOU ARE!



"A SOW'S EAR" . . . is probably a harsh description of your house even if you do now find it too small, or too dull, or too old — without being old enough to be interesting.

Well that's the easy part of your problem, because as you can see from these pictures there's almost NOTHING that you might like in a new house which can't be changed in, or added to, your present one. What you can't replace are your garden, a favorite tree, a view, your friends, your neighborhood, nor your children's friends, schools, parks and playgrounds. (And if you've lived in your home long enough to value all these things, then through inflation you've also built up a large equity in the property which can be put to work for you.)

"A SILK PURSE"

Even if your home is like it may still upset you because of its size, or lack of facilities. If it does have shortcomings—remove them; go UP, dig DOWN, add a fireplace, a modern bathroom or kitchen, a guest bedroom. Hide cracked concrete, stucco or plaster, behind slate, stone, wood panelling or wallpaper.

And remember that while renovating isn't cheap, it's much less than the cost of moving to a newer version of the same poor design (a long way from where you are now—because the good lots are gone, or cost the earth) and beginning all over again by planting that first shrub on a raw lot. Call us to help you—and STAY HOME! (And if you're totally content, refer us to a friend.)

WANT TO START ALL OVER AGAIN? YOU CAN

New York Times

NEW YORK — His arms flailing around in the tub of warm water, snorkel in place, Arthur began to scream a very primal scream. "I don't want to be born! I don't want to be born! I don't want to be born! I don't want to be here at all!"

Dana had images. Scary images. Traumatic images. "I was physically paralysed. I had a clear picture of my birth. I didn't want to breathe. The umbilical cord was wrapped around my neck. I couldn't breathe. I was choking."

Robin heard it all. He felt the car crash. He heard his mother scream to his father, "If there is anything wrong with this child I'll never talk to you again." Three months premature, he was delivered into the world in the house of an aunt. He remembers it all. Being born. Being placed in the middle of a four-poster bed. In a room. All alone.

They call it birth trauma. And Arthur, Dana and Robin, all devotees of rebirthing, one of the newest philosophies in the human potential movement, have all been "reborn."

They took off their clothes, donned a snorkel and nose-clip, submerged themselves in a bathtub and began to b r e a t h e. And as they breathed, deeper and deeper, they went back. Literally reliving, not just conjuring up images. Back to the beginning. Back to what Freud called the first trauma — birth.

Since April, 1974, more than 10,000 people have been reborthed through a national organization call Theta, a group founded by Leonard Orr, a former consultant to an organization called Erhard Seminars Training (EST).

EST is a 60-hour self-realization program developed in 1971 by Werner Erhard, a former management consultant. The program encourages people to take responsibility for their own lives and to understand that they cause their experiences.

Theta's New York office is one of a dozen rebirthing centres around the U.S.

Followers of the rebirthing movement believe that at the moment of birth we form impressions about the world that we carry with us all of our lives, controlling us from a subconscious level. Most of the impressions, they say, are negative. Life is a struggle, life is painful, people will hurt me. I can't get enough love.

The idea behind rebirthing is that, after nine supposedly blissful months in the womb, with all our needs taken care of and nothing to do but enjoy, we were shot into a world of bright lights, strangers, noxious noises — yanked from a world of pleasure and calm to a world of pain and chaos. And, so they say, it has colored our view of life ever since.

Go back and relive your birth, understand it as an adult, and suddenly life will become a bit clearer, the rebirthers believe.

'Other' Colombo Also a Detective

COLOMBO

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Meet the other Colombo.

Not the dogged, squint-eyed detective in the crumpled grey raincoat television viewers have come to know.

This is the Canadian Colombo. Oh, he's dogged too, and something of a detective in his own way. But definitely not Peter Falk. You can see that right off. For one thing he wears a tweed overcoat.

The comparison doesn't bother Canada's John Robert Colombo. He's used to it. He expects it and what's more it's good for business.

For our Colombo is a writer, a poet, above all a "master gatherer" of Canadiana. It makes him happy when people recognize his name, whatever the reason, and happier still when they buy his books.

His name is easy to spot. Go into any bookstore, seek out the reference section and there on the shelf you'll find in big, bold type Colombo's Canadian Quotations. Nearby, likely, is Colombo's Little Book of Canadian Proverbs and Graffiti.

Soon, fresh from the printers, will come Colombo's Concise Canadian Quotations and Colombo's Canadian References.

In the works are two more books — Colombo's Celebrated Canadians, a collection of biographical sketches on 300 living Canadians, and Colombo's Canadian Images, a photographic essay of Canada's major cities.

In Victoria last week, the 40-year-old Kitchener-born writer said in an interview that for as long as he could remember he knew he'd make his mark in the literary world.

Once, he said, he thought it might be as a poet. But although he's had 10 books of verse published, he said he gave up the notion long ago he'd ever achieve greatness in that field.

He didn't discover just where he would make his mark until 1970 when he began to collect quotable Canadian quotes.

He spent four years gathering material from books, newspapers, old forgotten letters, from friends, colleagues, academicians. He was never without a notebook and would jot down anything anyone said if he thought the quote worth preserving.

From that beginning Colombo said he decided to branch out and do collections on other aspects of Canadiana.

"I think what I am doing is fairly unique," he said. "No one else has really thought about it before — at least not on the scale I have. No one else wanted to take the gamble."

Now that he is gaining national recoginition, hardly a day passes by that he doesn't receive at least one letter from some person who has found an interesting aphorism or fact for inclusion in one of the Colombo books.

His quotation file alone now numbers more than 16,000 entries, neatly tucked away on three-by-five-inch cards in the library of his home in North York near Toronto.

SOFT CONTACT LENSES— HOW GOOD ARE THEY?

While many of the 1.5 million Canadians who have been fitted for them can wear contact lenses with ease, a great number have never been able to adjust to them. Eye irritation is one of the main reasons. But now there are soft contacts on the market. When a product is related to something as precious as sight, there are a lot of questions to be asked. In a special report to consumers, the December issue of Reader's Digest asks a leading Canadian specialist for answers to questions like: Are soft contact lenses more comfortable? How effective are they? Are they safe? How much do they cost? We compiled the answers to these and other questions in SOFT CONTACT LENSES — HOW GOOD ARE THEY? It's an article worth looking into, and it's just one of more than 34 articles and features in the December issue of Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

China Purge Out of Hand?

HONG KONG (WP) — China called Sunday for restraint in the ongoing purge of supporters of the four disgraced radical leaders, indicating that the campaign has got out of hand.

An editorial in the Communist party newspaper, People's Daily, considered an official policy statement of the new Chinese leadership, said that even individuals "who have made serious mistakes" should be allowed to "correct their mistakes."

It emphasized a quotation from the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung: "There is no reason whatsoever for the working class to split into two irreconcilable groupings."

There have been reports of unrest in at least five Chinese provinces — Fukien, Hupei, Kiangsi, Hunan and Honan — since Hua Kuo-feng arrested Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, and three cohorts early in October and succeeded Mao as party chairman. As has happened in previous Chinese political campaigns, local officials with old scores to settle appear to be using new anti-radical slogans against assorted political foes.

This has forced perhaps the most serious breakdown of discipline in China in more than a year in Fukien, a strategic southeast province. There, party officials have taken the extraordinary measure of dispatching army units to restore order in cities, schools, factories and mines.

In what is perhaps the clearest admission to date of an apparent loss of party control, Sunday's editorial said, "The exposure and criticism of the 'gang of four' should be carried out under unified leadership of the party committees. Don't establish ties independent of party committee leadership and don't organize fighting groups in any form."

Since Hua's appointment as Communist party chairman Oct. 7, a nationwide media campaign has begun to discredit Chiang and her colleagues, Wang Hung-we, Chang Chun-chiao, and Yao Wen-yuan, who seem to be the most fervent supporters of radical Maoist policies such as promotion of youth and regulate purges of the bureaucracy.

The new campaign has included calls to uproot local officials who may have cooperated with the "gang of four," but Sunday's editorial cautioned: "We should firmly keep to the general orientation of the struggle," (and) always direct the spearhead of our task at the Wang-Chang-Chiang-Yao anti-party clique . . ."

U.S. Eyeing New Rapid-Fire Tank

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. defence department scientists are exporing a new concept for a rapid-firing tank cannon that might revolutionize armor warfare late in this century.

Scientists and engineers of the Pentagon's Advanced Research Projects Agency are working on such a lightweight gun for the tank generation beyond the new XM-1 tank now being developed. Years of work lie ahead before the concept can be translated into combat hardware they say.

This long-range project shows that Pentagon specialists believe the tank still will be a potent weapon 20 years from now, despite the growth and increased sophistication of anti-tank weaponry.

However, some congressmen have questioned whether the tank is not already obsolescent on the modern battlefield in light of severe Israeli tank losses during the 1973 Middle East war. Anti-tank missiles accounted for many of those losses.

Press Anti-Quebec, Says Study

QUEBEC (CP) — Canada's English-language press perpetuates the prejudices and ignorance of its readers towards Quebec, says an article in a Quebec government publication.

"A methodical analysis of three large daily newspapers from Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver shows that, through the choice of news items played up and through the way in which they are presented, the English-speaking press persistently conveys a pejorative interpretation of the Quebec reality," the article says.

The three-page article, entitled The Interpretation of the Quebec Reality in the English-language Press, is contained in the latest issue of the quarterly magazine, Antennes, the official publication of the communications department, to be published today.

The article is a summary of a study of The Globe and Mail of Toronto, the Winnipeg Free Press and the Vancouver Sun, conducted between September, 1974, and August, 1975, by historian Paul Bernier.

The study was based on 235 articles from the Globe, 222 from the Free Press and 84 from the Sun.

News stories often run on page one of the newspapers, deal mostly with labor problems, crime and public inquiries, and describe Quebec "as the scene of chaos" or as a society in the grip of anarchy.

The article continues:

"Political activity in Quebec is the subject of few news stories but of many commentaries."

Several examples are cited such as a headline in the March 18, 1975, issue of the Globe "The Cliche Inquiry: Nothing Else Has Dug Up So Much In So Little Time."

The subtitle was: "The Labor Probe That Indicted Quebec Society As A Whole."

The author of the Antennes article comments: "The newspaper decided to give special play to this item which puts the Quebec government on the spot and it (the Globe) took pains to pin the problem on the state of Quebec society as a whole."

The article adds: "Newspaper complacently display headlines on crime or the amounts devoted to projects such as the Olympics or James Bay in which one can detect the need to place Quebec in a class apart."

The choice of stories, headlines, wording, pictures, caricatures and comentaries, including editorials, are all geared to making Quebec look like a province worse than the other nine.

"As a result, English-language journalism builds up a large part of its circulation on the diehard prejudices of its readership and to keep that readership, it contributes to the maintenance, if not the worsening, of the lack of understanding that is always present when various ethnic groups co-exist."

The conclusions of the study appear to echo the sentiments of Francois Cloutier, former Liberal minister of intergovernmental affairs, who complained last summer about Quebec's poor image in Ontario newspapers.

CP CLAIM REJECTED

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian Press letter claiming censorship by the Parliamentary Press Gallery in a recent labor dispute, "contains a number of glaring inaccuracies," according to Commons Speaker James Jerome.

The letter from general manager John Dauphinee of the national news co-operative was received Monday. It dealt with the decision by the Parliamentary Press Gallery Oct. 15 to deny temporary accreditation to CP personnel pending a committee study of how to handle such applications for such membership in future legal labor disputes.

That committee is in the process of preparing its report. Peter Ward, free-lance journalist heading the three-man committee, said at least two of the members including himself will recommend to the gallery that temporary accreditation be denied in future to staff of an employer engaged in a legal labor dispute.

The CP letter says Jerome informed the company Oct. 19 that he would continue the practice of accepting press gallery authority in saying who can and who cannot be gallery members.

Jerome said the Dauphinee letter contains errors.

For example, there seemed to be a premise that the gallery had taken a judgment about the CP labor dispute when in fact that was not true.

There was also a "clear contradiction" in the CP letter in saying that it did not seek to challenge the right "granted to the press gallery to issue credentials", but that it also chose to "object most strenuously to the misuse of this power by refusal to issue credentials . . ."

Voters Find Papers Define the Issues

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Preliminary findings of a national study on voters choices in the 1976 U.S. presidential election indicate newspapers exert more influence than television on what people think is important, but television is better at arousing interest.

David Weaver, associate professor of journalism at Indiana University, Bloomington, one of the researchers, said in an interview that the formal report on the study, which began in January and goes through December, will not be ready until next year.

A preliminary report from Weaver and Maxwell McCombs, professor of journalism at Syracuse University, contained some tentative conclusions based on in-depth interviews through July. Also working on this research project is Lee Becker, assistant professor of journalism at Syracuse.

"In this study we have been asking what issues are most important to them and also asked about the candidates, what kinds of things they would tell a friend that has been away for a long time," Weaver said.

"What we found was that those people who relied most on newspapers for political news tended to be concerned about the same issues. Newspapers seem to have a more powerful effect on their concern over certain issues than does television," Weaver said.

"People who relied most on newspapers for political news had very stable issue-agenda. Those who relied mainly on television had the least stable issue-agenda. The issues they were concerned about tended to change from month to month."

"Those who rely mainly on both (newspapers and television) were closer to the newspaper people than to TV," Weaver said. "That suggests newspapers have more influence on what people think are important than does TV. But you find that those people who relied mainly on TV are the most highly interested. It seems TV is especially good at raising peoples interest in politics."

Another tentative conclusion from the still-continuing study was that as the campaign went on, people who relied on only one news medium for political information tended to become more concerned about the personalities of the candidates than the issues, Weaver said.

"But among those who relied on both for political information, the biggest gains were for issue stands," Weaver said. "This is not surprising. Those who rely on both tend to be those most interested in politics, most highly educated and trying to get all the information about candidates."

The July data on the attitudes of the persons interviewed concerning Jimmy Carter and President Ford showed the question of honesty was topmost in their minds. "Most of our people saw him (president-elect Carter) as either honest or dishonest, sincere or insincere, charismatic or bland," Weaver said.

On Ford, "most of the people in our sample talked about honesty or dishonesty or qualified or unqualified," he said.

The results of the three-university research project probably will emerge in final form as a book, as did the work of these same researchers on the 1972 presidential election.

That book, "the Emergence of Public Issues" by McCombs and Donald Shaw, professor of journalism at the University of North Carolina, is due for release in about a month.

LONDON — A British court ruled Tuesday that King Kong's territory is an exclusively male preserve, by banning a female rival named Queen Kong.

The court granted an injunction restraining Dexter films from distributing a new movie called Queen Kong pending a full hearing of a copyright dispute.

RKO, makers of the original King Kong movie in 1933, sought the injunction, along with the Dino de Laurentis Corp., licensed by RKO to make a new $20-million movie about the giant gorilla.

Dexter films argued that despite resemblances, copyright was not infringed, maintaining that King Kong was about a male gorilla, Queen Kong about a female.

Scrabble Players Come Out of Closet For the First B.C. Tournament

VANCOUVER — The occasion more closely resembled a cocktail party than a contest of wits and words.

The participants ranged from secretaries and teachers to civil servants and students. They came to enjoy themselves — not to win, they said.

Ninety-two players — the youngest 16, the eldest 77 — gathered at a Vancouver restaurant for British Columbia's first open Scrabble tournament.

It was the first time most of the players had come up against opponents who were not neighbors or friends. One player observed: "The Scrabble players have come out of the closet."

The mood changed as players prepared for the first of three one-hour games. Some scanned the official dictionary, trying to memorize words like quag and zoa. Others reviewed the rules.

"Some of them look like real battle-axes," said Phyllis Westmacott, guardian of the dictionary and judge of which challenged words were acceptable.

"You should see some of the expressions on their faces when they come to look at the dictionary."

One woman lost her nerve.

"I've never played the game before in my life," she said on her way out. "I didn't know it was a tournament.

"My friends just said come on down for an evening of Scrabble."

The remaining players faced their opponents, eyeing the "triple letter" and "double word" premium squares on the empty boards.

Beside them were egg timers setting a three-minute deadline for each move.

The only sound was the shuffling of wooden tiles inside paper bags as the players shook up the letters.

John Pozer, operator of a games shop and co-sponsor of the tournament along with a local radio station, commented on the score sheets as they came in.

A score of 250 was rated mediocre.

"A good player should get about 400 to 500 points," he said. "For that you need about three seven-letter words."

He said the tournament was the first step toward establishing regular scrabble games in Vancouver.

High scorer for the evening was Susie Darke, 25, whose total score was 1,258 points for the three games. Her highest score for one game was 501.

She won a wateh, a $50 gift certificate and, of course, a scrabble set.

The University of B.C. secretary said her strategy depended on small words strategically placed. "Big words are not the answer," she added.

The losers had their reasons for the outcome of the games.

"I got 422 the first game," said Al Ricard, 28. "Then I got hit by five I's the second time and went down to 358. You can't do much with two S's and five I's. You've got to pick up the good ones — X's and Z's."

Writer-broadcaster Chuck Davis, who said he is hooked on the game, finished seventh. He said the third game was the toughest because the arrangement of the words on the board offered few places to make additions.

BIG STEP FOR VIRGINIA

A major step forward in pursuit of a professional theatre career has been taken by 21-year-old Virginia Lace (right), former University of Victoria theatre student and daughter of Major and Mrs. John Lace of Sidney.

Recently she was one of a number of students accepted for a two-year course at the Webber Douglas Academy of Dramatic Art in London, England.

Since receiving her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from UVic, Virginia worked in Toronto before going to England and finding a job organizing conferences and public relations for the headquarters of the National Operatic and Dramatic Association of Great Britiain, a position that involved considerable travelling around Britain.

She attended Claremont Secondary School here and was a member of Don Kyle's successful Claremont choir. She had roles in UVic Phoenix productions of The Last of the Red Hot Lovers, Broadway and Hot 1 Baltimore and in the UVic-Victoria Theatre Guild Theatre Canada showcase production of Threepenny Opera.

Love in a Patrol Car No Cop-Out in New York

NEW YORK — A police team who shared a patrol car in Brooklyn for two months liked it so much they've become an off-duty team. Joe Povelaitis and Katherine Bridges disclosed that when reassignment sent Miss Bridges to the Bronx they could not stand the separation. So they went down to city hall and got married.

MOSCOW — Marshal Ivan Yakubovsky, commander-in-chief of the East European Warsaw pact treaty alliance, died Tuesday, Tass news agency reports. Yakubovsky, who was born in 1912, was the Soviet Union's first deputy defence minister. He was twice awarded the title of Hero of the Soviet Union. Tass described him as an outstanding Soviet military figure. Yakubovsky, a member of the Communist party central committee, was a unit commander during the Second World war and became commander-in-chief of Soviet troops in Germany in 1967.

LOS ANGELES — A cocaine possession charge against Louise Lasser, star of the TV comedy-soap opera Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, was dismissed after she completed a drug education program, court officials said Tuesday. Miss Lasser, 35, was arrested May 12 when she became involved in an argument at a local boutique. While she was being booked on outstanding traffic warrants, police said they discovered a vial of white powder in her purse and the drug charge was added.

LOS ANGELES — Mary Tyler Moore, star of her own CBS television series, has signed an exclusive long-term contract with CBS-TV, says Robert Wussler, head of the network. He said Tuesday that under the agreement, Miss Moore will star in at least two specials next season on CBS and star in a new series on CBS during the 1978-79 season. Miss Moore's current series is in its seventh and final season. The star has said she wants the series ended so she can work on other projects for television.

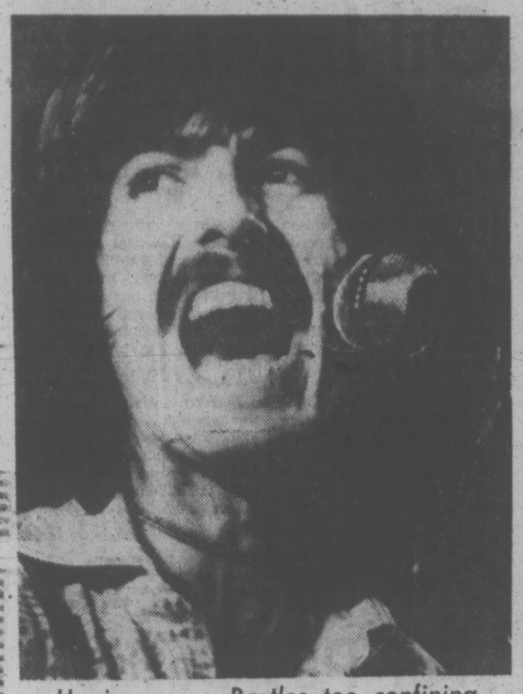
George Thinks Things Are Looking Up



Harrison . . . Beatles too confining

By LARRY ROHTER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It has not been the best of years for George Harrison.

He marked the start of 1976 by coming down with a case of hepatitis, which kept him in bed for 2½ months. Before he was fully recovered from that, it was time to deal with another kind of case — the song plagairism suit that required three days of testimony over the origins of My Sweet Lord, his first big hit as a solo artist, and which eventually was decided against Harrison.

Early summer saw the release of a Beatles retrospective album that the former Beatles lead guitarist still maintains is "tasetless" and exploitative. And then there was another legal hassle to be faced, this one centering around a squabble between Harrison's Dark Horse Records and A & M Records, which had advanced $2.6 million to launch Dark Horse, for claiming damages of $10 million for alleged "non-delivery of product" on Harrison's part.

But by the time the second half of November rolls around, bringing Harrison to Washington in the company of Warner Bros. Records chairman Mo Ostin, who negotiated the $4.4 million settlement with A & M that has enabled Harrison to move over to America's most successful record combine, things seem to be looking up.

As he sits in his 15th-floor suite at the Madison Hotel, Harrison seems pale and haggard, but he's chipper and ready to talk — not only about his new album, which he is on the road promoting, but also about his bout of the "SUE ME, SUE YOU BLUES."

It turns out, in fact, that parts of "33⅓ . . . the title of Harrison's new record and, coincidentally, his age when sessions for the album begin in June, comment on those very problems.

This song, picked as the first single from the album, is probably the best — and amost obvious — example.

"There are so many songs that are similar to some degree," Harrison says between sips of tea, "that I started to get really worried about writing songs after I testified. I'd pick up a guitar and say, 'Well, I can't use those chords, those chords have already been used. And I can't use those words, 'cause I've heard those words before.'

"Your know, it becomes a problem, and you start to get really paranoid about it. And so in the end I thought, 'Oh, I'm not going to get hung up about this.' So I decided to treat it positively, and I wrote This Song."

It is a witty number, in part because Harrison's friend, Eric Idle, of the Monty Python comedy troupe, offers a hilarious falsetto commentary on the court proceedings at the end of one verse. But there's also a bite to Harrison's lyrics: as he puts I get me digs in with lines like This song has nothing tricky about it. This song ain't black or white and as far as I know don't infringe on anyone's copyright, so . . ."

Like the other nine tunes on "33⅓ . . . This Song was recorded in Los Angeles with the session men Harrison has worked with regularly since the breakup of the Beatles: Tom Scott, Billy Preston, Willie Weeks. He is comfortable with these players — he's even hoping to take them on the road for a concert tour during next summer — but press him a bit and he'll admit that, yes, there are times when he does get a hankering to work with John, Paul and Ringo.

"I definitely do miss it in some ways. When you have a band, there's a certain amount of knowledge you have about one another, and you can fit right into a slot. There's a certain starting point that's already established that you don't have to spell out as you do with new musicians.

"I liked having that instant situation we got into with the Beatles, but at the same time, I don't think I could stand it again. It was too confining. The good thing about being on one's own is all the time being able to use other musicians. There's an advantage to that, because a single new musician can change your music. With some of the tracks on this album, if I had used different people on bass and drums, the songs would have come out entirely different. Even if the rhythm had been the same the song would have had a whole other feel. That's what new musicians can inject into your music."

So don't go expecting a Beatles reunion overnight. Though Harrison's current contract with Warner Bros. contains a clause that permits him to join the other Beatles on any record label he chooses, should the group get together again, he says he's prefectly happy working as a solo artist with his "really funky rhythm section," and seems unmoved by calls for a Beatles reunion.

Some of the proposals, such as the one-time charity concert deal offered by former U.S. Beatles manager Sid Bernstein, he doesn't like at all. "He's put us on the spot," says Harrison of Bernstein and his proposed $230-million concert, closed circuit TV, record and movie package. "It's a bit unfair to ask the Beatles to save the world.

Lewis: Clown Who Cares

By KENNETH TURAN
Washington Post

BALTIMORE — Jerry Lewis bleeds. Publicly and profusely. The world's problems are his problems, other people's cares are his own. If he is a clown, he is a Rouault clown, somber; with heavy lids over large, unhappy eyes.

"I suffer from trying to make everything perfect for everybody, and it's not in the cards," he says, resigned. "My grandmother told me, 'You're going to be very unhappy. What you want to do isn't possible.' "

That doesn't mean, of course, that Jerry Lewis doesn't try. He tries, in fact, with an intensity of concern that is almost menacing. "I'm an emotional person, I get emotional when my laundry comes back," he says. "It's a waste of time to look at a thing and not have a point of view. That's how I'm built."

As he talks about his feelings about muscular dystrophy, for instance, the vitriol in his voice becomes totally chilling. "When it comes to that vicious son of a bitch," he says, "I hate it with such a passion. It's the only productive hate I have. There aren't enough words to describe how I feel. I really want something tangible I can kill."

It is 10 o'clock in the morning in a very large hotel room. Along one wall are almost all of the 124 suitcases which Lewis, a consummate gadget freak who tapes all his interviews, wears a two-time-zone watch and knows more about photography than most professional photographers, never travels without.

Jerry Lewis looks very tired but he is still extremely sharply dressed, as befits a man who has close to 40 pairs of pants hanging side by side in an open closet. "Last night," he says, blinking, "I would have given $50,000 not to do this interview."

He never sleeps more than four hours a night anyhow — "There's too much to do, I'm afraid I'm missing something" — but this is the morning after the opening of "Hellzapoppin," a self-described musical circusd headed for Washington's National Theatre on Dec. 7 and eventually New York, which is also Lewis' first appearance on the legitimate stage. Later, when his producer brings in a copy of the page-and-a-half ad which will appear in the Sunday New York Times, he looks at it and sighs, "I've waited 45 years for this."

This somber Jerry Lewis is very different from the zany madcap known from the screen, the man critic Andrew Sarris called "a Golem of grotesque comic energy."

It is even different from the private Lewis of not so many years back, the compulsive entertainer surrounded by a "If you say it's funny, Jerry baby, we say it's funny" crowd. "When I was younger, you'd have to crawl over 25 bodies to get to me. I realized it was not necessary to have a trainload of people with me. When you're young, you pray and hope to please everyone. When wisdom comes, you know you can't."

Lewis' dispassion extends in an almost eerie way to his stage persona, which he consistently talks about in the third person as either "the idiot" or "little Jerry." "He's just totally someone else," the serious Lewis explains. "I write notes to myself referring to things he's done. The son of a bitch, if he can get away with something, he will. He forgets I go to sleep with him every night. But nobody can knock his intentions. I've never known his not trying, his dogging it. And he never blames anyone else."

For the past 45 years, ever since he made his stage debut at age five by singing "Brother, Can You Spare A Dime?" with his show business parents, the little Jerry has been good to the big one. The screen simpleton, the lunatic busboy, the bucktoothed terror has made 41 films. Films made, Lewis once said, for "Mr. and Mrs. Two-and-One-Half-Room Flat," films which generated $300 million and such trust in their creator that a studio executive is said to have said, "If he wants to burn down the studio, I'll hand him the match."

Most people remember Jerry Lewis in connection with Dean Martin. It was a partnership that started in 1946 in an Atlantic City nightclub with material written on a hot pastrami bag, lasted through 16 films and ended with such finality after exactly 10 years to the day, that the pair did not speak again until earlier this year, when Lewis' first words were a professionally nonchalant "You workin'?"

"I provoked the break," Lewis says now. "We had gotten to the peak, and I thought, 'Why hang on to the demise, why not go out like a champion?' I always remembered the sad, devastating moment when Joe Louis was knocked through the ropes. People get greedy, they don't know when to stop."

Four-Laner Given Go-Ahead Despite Protest by Indians

PENTICTON (CP) — Construction will begin immediately on the four-lane Channel Parkway, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday, over opposition of an Indian band.

Fraser said the project will not go to tender but will be done by highways department crews.

The call for tenders had been delayed after Chief Morris Kruger of the Penticton Indian band informed the department that two pieces of land, owned by individual band members, were on the proposed right of way.

"There is no Indian land involved in the parkway," Fraser said, "and we intend to go ahead with the work, without a contract or tender call, using our own crews."

The minister said the disputed land was, in fact, land turned over to the federal public works department by the federal Indian affairs branch.

Penticton Indian band is not going to stand idly by if B.C. highways (Crews) move in to start the parkway, Chief Kruger said Tuesday.

"We've got a good case, (on parkway lands) and besides, if they want to push the parkway, we can do some pushing on Green Mountain road," he said.

Green Mountain road runs through Penticton Indian reserve. The much-used road leads to ski resorts and to ranchlands west of here.

"They'll have to negotiate with us. We're not going to back off on this one," he added.

Chief Kruger said the order-in-council designating the right-of-way for the Okanagan River flood channel was issued in 1955, some time after the channel was completed.

He said the Indians will challenge the order.

He also said the original Indian reserve boundary followed the Okanagan River which meandered across the flatlands of Penticton. In the late 1940s, a straight flood channel was cut through four miles of the flatlands.

"Some of that land along the river course ended up on the Penticton side and was taken too," said the chief.

"If the highways crews move in to start work on the parkway, they'll meet a lot of angry Indians."

Rivtow Head Denies Charge Malibu Princess Not Safe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cecil Cosulich, president of Rivtow Straits Ltd., has denied a member of the legislature's charges that new transportation arrangements on British Columbia's central and northern coast are endangering lives.

Don Lockstead (NDP — Mackenzie) demanded that Transport Minister Jack Davis replace the Malibu Princess, which sails between Prince Rupert and Masset on the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Cosulich said Tuesday "there is no way" his company would operate any vessel which is unsafe.

"It's not up to us in any case," he said. "We can't take a boat from the dock unless it has the complete approval of the Ministry of Transport.

"Before the Malibu Princess left here it was brought into our shipyard and minor modifications were made . . .

"I bitterly resent statements like those made by Lockstead. A responsible man should be more careful."

The new shipping services were introduced Nov. 1 after the federal government refused to continue subsidizing Northland Navigation Co. Ltd., which had provided passenger and freight service on the coast.

Besides criticizing the safety of the Malibu Princess, Lockstead also called for an inquiry into the awarding of the new shipping contract to Rivtow.

He said the contract was let without bids and there appeared to be an association between the Liberal party and at least one senior official of Rivtow.

Cosulich, an active member of the Liberal party, denied that his political affiliation had anything to do with his company's take-over of coastal shipping.

"The only reason the government appeared to be kind to us in that respect is because we are the only company in B.C. except for Northland which has a basis to operate such a service," he said.

Meanwhile, Coast Ferries Ltd. of Vancouver said Tuesday it is ending its "joint venture agreement" with Rivtow service to the south coast effective today.

George Garrish, a spokesman for Coast, said the two companies had entered into the agreement 90 days ago in an attempt to provide better service to the area.

He said coast operates two freight vessels serving 100 communities between Howe Sound and Rivers Inlet and also operates a scheduled tug-barge service to Powell River and Texada Island.

Another coast spokesman said the decision to end the agreement was "taken at a time when tension in the marine community is running deep over differences in providing scheduled freight service by the tug barge or self-propelled vessels."

Garrish said his company has been serving the south coast for 20 years and the decision to join Rivtow was made after the federal government rejected Coast's bid last summer for a subsidy during the winter.

Holdups Charged

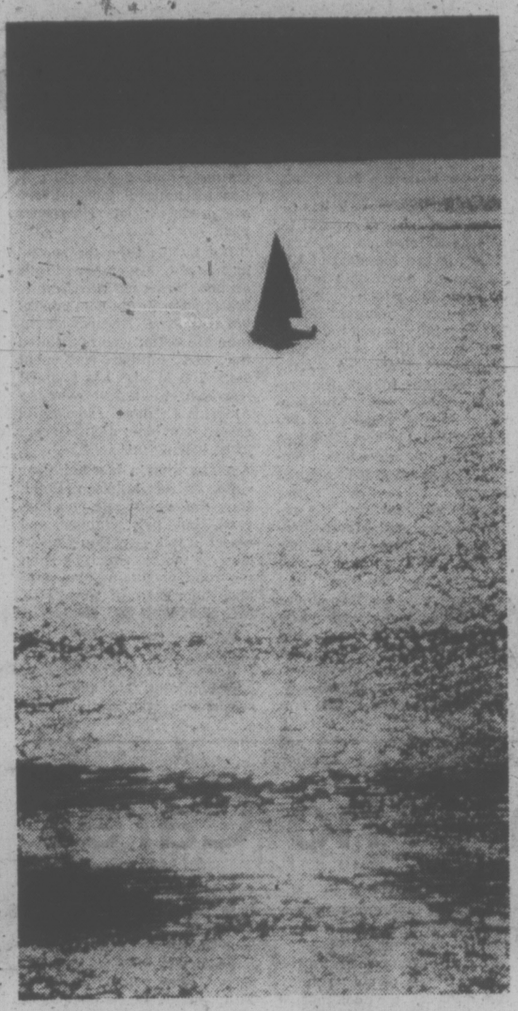
VANCOUVER (CP) — Douglas James King, 27, of Vancouver, has been charged in provincial court with six armed bank holdups in which nearly $40,000 was stolen. He has been remanded in custody without plea to Dec. 6.

B.C. Pen Won't Bill Prisoners

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prisoners at the British Columbia Penitentiary in nearby New Westminster won't be given the kind of damage bill assessed prisoners in Millhaven Institute at Kingston, Ont., a penitentiary spokesman said Tuesday.

Prisoners at Millhaven have been charged with $300,000 resulting from their October shashing spree.

Jack Stewart, B.C. Penitentiary spokesman, said the destruction by prisoners here made the assessment of damages difficult.



SUN RAYS in the late hours of a fall day silver the waters of Esquimalt Harbor, darkening the sails of a lone sailboat making her way slowly in the quiet stillness.

Oil Interests Eye B.C. Coal

TORONTO (CP) — Denison Mines Ltd. says that Imperial Oil Ltd. plans to acquire a 16.75 per cent interest in Quintette Coal Ltd., which holds a prospective metallurgical coal property in northeastern British Columbia.

Spokesman for Imperial Oil and Denison, which has a 38.25 per cent interest in Quintette, would not discuss the value of the transaction, pending a final agreement and approval by the respective boards as well as governments.

However, industry analysts estimate the deal would be worth about $30 million.

Denison said that apart from the 16.75 per cent interest that Imperial would acquire, the remaining 45 per cent would be held by two Japanese firms, Mitsui Mining Co. and Tokyo Boeki Ltd.

Denison, which manages the property, is completing exploration work on the 96,000-acre Quintette property, which it estimates to contain about 2.8 billion tons of coal in place.

Greenpeace Set For Pay Battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob Hunter, president of the Greenpeace Foundation, said Tuesday the foundation intends to contest the lawsuit claiming unpaid wages of $8,500 by a former employee.

Edwin Haggerty of Victoria, a former engineer on the anti-whaling vessel the James Bay, filed a writ in federal court on Friday claiming the unpaid wages from the owner of the ship, the James Bay Exploration Co. of Seattle and the Greenpeace Foundation.

"Ted Haggerty was hired by the owner (Charles Davis) in an agreement where he paid half the wages and we paid half. We told Ted we couldn't afford him in Hawaii when his agreement with the owner ran out and he said he was turned on by what we were doing and would donate his salary back to Greenpeace. This (court action) is the last thing we expected," Hunter said.

B.C. Salmon Cheaper in Ontario—CAC

Higher food markups combined with lower family incomes are blamed for making life onerous for B.C. consumers.

In a brief to Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair Tuesday, the B.C. branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada pointed out that wages in this province are second to Ontario, yet in Ontario grocery markups are about five per cent lower than in Vancouver.

Many basic food commodities suffer this discrepancy, including B.C.-produced items like tinned salmon and bottled milk, the association declared.

It asked Mair to set up a task force of deputy ministers to initiate, co-ordinate and review food policy in B.C., involving all ministries with an interest in the production and marketing of foodstuffs.

Mair told the consumer delegation one of his main interests is the differential in food pricing between not only B.C. and other parts of Canda, but within the province.

He promised to examine the CAC recommendations closely and discuss them with other members of cabinet, said provincial president Jean Douglas.

Among the specific examples of high-priced B.C. food given by the associatin were Cloverleaf sockeye salmon at $1.49-$1.53 in Vancouver versus $1.34-$1.39 in Toronto, and three quarts of two per cent skim milk at $1.77 in a Vancouver supermarket compared with $1.19 in Toronto.

The same three-quart container in a B.C. independent store costs $1.82 but only $1.28 in Toronto independent shops.

Broiler chickens here are 15 cents a pound higher than in Quebec. Alberta food prices are generally 10 per cent less than in B.C., and next door in Washington they are 6-8 per cent lower than in this province.

The absence of real competition in B.C. food marketing was an important reason for the higher markups, the association said, noting that in the east there are large discount stores.

The brief asked the minister to take the lead for all Canada in implementing a comprehensive food policy in this province.

Accompanying Douglas were national president Ruth Lotzkar and executive member Jill Watt.

They asked Mair to re-examine B.C. food supply management systems and expressed concern that marketing boards control both production and prices.

The brief urged researching and monitoring of prices throughout the province and requested monthly reports of findings.

The CAC seeks enforcement of a competition policy; sees the need of studies dealing with uncompetitive processing, distribution and retailing practices and the effect of transportation costs on prices; a full inventory and assessment of agricultural land and development of a land-use policy; encouragement of farmers' markets; mandatory unit food pricing in supermarkets with all prices displayed on each item, and departmental supervision of metric conversion and a movement toward computerized checkouts.

McKENZIE ALONE ON BLANSHARD

Victoria Mayor Mike Young wants it on the record at the provincial level that he and seven of his city council colleagues dissociate themselves from recent "ex gratia" statements by Ald. Ron McKenzie about tenants of the Blanshard Court housing development.

In a letter of apology to Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, dated Nov. 19, stresses that McKenzie's public comments about the tenants were strictly expressions of personal opinion, in no way reflecting council's official attitude.

He says: "While council is understandably concerned about the extent of the deficit on this project, and the fact that social assistance is being granted in the form of subsidized rental, neither myself nor, I am sure, the majority of council is particularly critical of the actual expenses or disbursements made in regard to this project."

But the mayor point out that the city finds it difficult enough to meet its pro rata share of social assistance payents "without being burdened by subsidizing the rentals of many of the tenants."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our East defender came up with a neat deceptive play that few bridge players would have made. The result was that he convinced the South declarer that a certain situation existed. The consequence was that South adopted a losing line of play.

	NORTH ♠ A Q 7 ♡ K J 10 ◇ 8 6 5 ♣ K 9 8 2
WEST ♠ 10 6 4 2 ♡ 8 5 3 ◇ 9 7 2 ♣ 6 4 3		EAST ♠ 9 8 5 ♡ 9 7 4 2 ◇ A K Q 3 ♣ Q 5
	SOUTH ♠ K J 3 ♡ A Q 6 ◇ J 10 4 ♣ A J 10 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ◇.

For reasons known only to himself, West decided not to lead his longest suit, spades. Instead, he got his fingers on what turned out to be the killing lead: a diamond. East promptly proceeded to cash the queen, king, and ace of diamonds — and then led the nine of spades!

Who could blame declarer for assuming that West was the possessor of the diamond three, the only diamond remaining in the deck? Surely if East had this card, he would have cashed it. So South won East's spade return with the jack, played the ace of clubs, and then led the club jack, finessing against West, to make sure that if the finesse lost, it would lose to East.

But, as is evident, East produced the queen of clubs, after which he proceeded to cash the three of diamonds, for the setting trick.

Actually, even if East had cashed his high diamond at trick four, declarer might still have gone down, since he would have been on a pure guess as to which way to finesse against the queen of clubs. But there is no doubt that East's decision not to cash the fourth diamond gave declarer a nudge in the wrong direction.

As a matter of statistics, when this deal was played (in a duplicate game), every one of the 13 South players arrived at a three-notrump contract, and four of them were defeated. Since there was no other place to make the ninth trick except in the club suit, presumably most of the declarers guessed the location of the club queen. But then there were four who didn't.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, December 2

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Collect, analyze data. Be direct, confident, especially if dealing with Cancer, Capricorn persons. You get chance to prove a point. Do it in manner which does not "destroy," one who has recently undergone emotional shock.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Be aware of social "obligations." One you have been taking for granted needs special consideration. Communications emphasized, including telephone messages, long-distance verifications. You could travel in connection with "long lost love." Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may have unusual dealings with Taurus. Accent now on friendship, wishes, desires, money realized from recent business enterprise. You may overturn tradition for purpose of rebuilding along lines of "your own tradition."

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Emphasis on ambition, change, ability to analyze, to express, to get thoughts in writing. Member of opposite sex plays significant role. What appears an obstacle is probably a healthy challenge. Meet it and you gain rare insights, a glimmer of truth that can make you strong.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): Concern with home affairs indicated; you make necessary domestic adjustment. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio could figure prominently. You learn about possible change in holiday travel plans. Outlook is more pleasant than has been true for recent seasonal occasions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Aura of mystery, glamour, romance—the spotlight is on, the evasive, elusive. Key is to be discreet, ready to attend clandestine meeting; with understanding you won't take everything you hear as gospel. Someone apparently expects something for nothing, from you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Emphasis on marital status, legal agreements, special arrangements, organization. What had passed as a casual meeting—or acquaintance — is apt to be something else—more serious. Listen and observe. Let others tip their hands. Obtain hint from Virgo message.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Finish project. Find ways to improve communication, distribution. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Be positive concerning basic issues, factual material. You are due to receive offer which, if accepted, will expand horizons.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Creative spark is ignited; go all out, pursue objectie with vigor, enthusiasm. Love, getting to heart of matters, dealing with flambouyant member of opposite sex. Leo, Aquarius persons could be featured. Make new starts in new directions—imprint your own mark, style.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Stick to basic issues. Guard rights—protect interests with regard to property, home. You are able now to complete an important transaction—and it has long-range implications. Know it and refuse to be impatient, careless or influenced by irresponsible contemporary.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Be flexible, willing to make changes, to see humor in what might appear to be a "sad story." Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You will be happier as burden is lifted. Relative confides an indiscretion—don't cast first stone.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): Emphasis on what to do, when to do it and how much to spend as result. Pride is involved, emotional security could be tested. Key is to "like" yourself—don't attempt to buy affection, refuse to be intimidated by one who cajoles, promises, pleads, threatens.

IF DECEMBER 2nd IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are frank, emotional, truthful, passionate, loyal, fond of travel, talented, creative, temperamental. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. July was outstanding for you this year, a year which say you make new starts and become more independent. In December, you get feet on ground, have solid offer to consider and could begin building construction.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 2289 for the game today. One 9, one 8, and two 2s. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. For example, 82 minus 9 plus 2 is a solution for 75.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 150. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

EXTRA LOT

This lovely home built in 1943, has 2,000 sq. ft. of luxury living space on two floors. Located in the preferred Cadboro Bay area close to the sea and all amenities. The large seaview lot was conditionally approved for subdividing so as to create an extra lot in 1970. Although no action was taken at that time, we feel — based on the letter of tentative approval — that there is a possibility of subdividing Mls. 20874. You know Trans Canada Highway, right? You take Trans-Canada for about six miles and turn off it to old Island Highway, as if you were going to Colwood, see? No sooner do you hit Island Highway but you turn off it at Askins Rd. O.K. So you are on Askins Rd., and you drive along until you see a sign that says Chilko Rd. But this isn't it. You pass it and drive another fifty feet on until you see another sign that says Chilco Rd. This is it. Turn left. You drive along Chilco till you see a sign that says "Donena" and drive right into the property — almost two acres of it. If the owners are home, they will show you around. Better bring some feed for the ducks, so that when you go down to the waterfront you will get the hang of it. Price $120,000 or offer. P.S. If these directions seem complicated then call me, Don Bacon, and I will take you there, that's a good way, too. 385-2458.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow ... r to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

308-A CARDS OF THANKS

Special thanks to the Resthaven Hospital Nursing Staff, and for the wonderful care from the replacement Homes Nursing Care, also to Drs. Warrell and Groves for the special attention given to our much-loved husband and father, the late Sam Arrowsmith. Thank you for the kind thoughts expressed in the floral arrangements and cards received. Sadly missed and loved by his wife Grace Arrowsmith, daughters Verna and Dorene.

SCHULZE—Mrs. Erna Schulze of 4827 Prospect Lake Road, Victoria, and family wish to thank their friends for their kindness and sympathy, also for flowers, cards, and donations to charitable funds in the sudden loss of our beloved Vati, Alfred Schulze.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BRYANT — In loving memory of Ron who passed away November 30, 1975.
One year has passed since that sad day
When one we loved was called away
God took him home — it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Fondly remembered by his Mom and Dad, brothers and sisters.

BRYANT — In loving memory of Ron Bryant who passed away November 30, 1975.
We often sit and think of him when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak, when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
—Fondly remembered by Debbie and Kim.

COPE—In loving memory of a dear Mother Ethel, who passed away Dec. 1, 1974.
Her memory is as dear today
As in the hour she passed away.
—Sadly missed by her daughter May and son-in-law Ray.

DAYKIN — In loving memory of Arthur, who passed away Nov. 30, 1974.
If I could have one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
I'd pray to God with all my heart,
For yesterday and you.
—Your wife Renie.

FENWICK — In loving memory of my dear husband, William, died Dec. 1st, 1951, also our only dear son, William R. died Jan. 22nd, 1972.
There is no parting from those we love
No distance can divide
Each day in memory's garden
We still walk side by side.
—Ever in the thoughts and hearts of your loving wife and mother, Edith, also Aunt Lillian.

JEWSBURY — In loving memory of my dear husband, Raymond George Jewsbury, who passed away Nov. 29, 1972.
Nothing can ever take away,
The love a heart hold dear.
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps his dear.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife Olivia and daughter Gail.

MANN — In loving memory of my dear husband, Jack, who passed away Dec. 1, 1969. Still greatly missed and lovingly remembered by his loving wife.
—Ingie and family.

TEAGUE — In loving memory of my husband, Everett Dempsey, who passed away Nov. 30, 1974.
The face I loved is now laid low,
His loving voice is still,
The hand so often clasped in mine,
Lies now in death's cold chill.
I often sit and think of him
When I am all alone;
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.
—Ever remembered by his wife Irene.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE. SANDS.

Centre for Handicapped May Be Ready in January

The Garth Homer Activity Centre for the handicapped could be in operation by Jan. 31, Joe Bourque, finance chairman for the Greater Victoria Activity Centre Society, said today.

He said an additional $196,000 is needed to complete the $1.6 million centre on Darwin.

The society recently received $150,000 from Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy's department and Bourque said he has been assured by Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis that a request for further funding would receive "favorable consideration at the end of February".

Bourque said $46,000 of the $196,000 will be spent to install one of the two elevators called for in the plans.

He said he is hoping to get one individual and two organizations as guarantors for the money needed to complete the centre and follow up with a fund-raising campaign in January.

"It will be a special names approach campaign not a door-to-door program," he said.

Director George Bate told the society's annual meeting in the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children on Tuesday that the new centre will fill a vital need for handicapped persons who don't fit into rigid institutional or agency programs.

"We must design programs for people, and not for programs," Bate said, "We must provide a focal point to assist the handicapped to achieve their goals."

He maintained integration of the handicapped into the community was as much a psychological and social commitment as it was a therapeutic one.

Dependence, for some disabled, was the real handicap, he added.

Rehabilitiation experts across North America will be watching with interest the centre's programs, Bate reported.

SOUTH KOREAN DEFECTS TO U.S.

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A top South Korean Central Intelligence Agency official here, who has personal knowledge of U.S. congressmen and other officials receiving money and gifts from South Korean agents, has begun cooperating with U.S. investigators in exchange for safe refuge in this country.

The official, Kim Sang Kaun, 43, recently had been ordered to return to Seoul from his South Korean embassy post here.

Instead, according to informed sources, Kim went to the FBI last week to seek protective custody and offer detailed information about the South Korean government's influence-buying here.

Kim is now being debriefed by FBI investigators at a secret location.

"He's naming names," said one source close to the investigation, "but we're not prepared yet to say who or how many."

FBI agents who had been working on the South Korean influence-buying investigation for many frustrating months were described by one knowledgeable source Tuesday night as "jubilant" about Kim's defection and testimony, which they regard as a major breakthrough.

MPs Quiz Slump in Dollar

OTTAWA (FP) — The sharp drop in the value of the Canadian dollar Tuesday to below 6 cents in relation to the United States dollar, stirred a flurry of questions in the Commons with the warnings that prices and jobs could be adversely affected.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told the house that the Canadian Government was continuing to allow the dollar to "float", it was not being pegged at any particular level.

"It seems to me that probably the most effective policy to be pursued at this time is that to which the government has given priority, that is to reduce the rate of inflation.

"That continues to be our policy," said the minister.

The financial critic for the official opposition, Sinclair Stevens (PC-York-Simcoe), expressed concern over the unplanned drop in the Canadian dollar's value.

It had recorded a five cent drop in a week.

He inquired if the news reports were correct that the Bank of Canada has used substantial amounts of our U.S. dollar reserves to support the Canadian dollar within the last three or four days to prevent the Canadian dollar from falling to lower levels.

He asked to what extent the Canadian reserves had been used.

Macdonald explained it is the policy of the Bank of Canada to intervene from time to time with price movements of the dollar in order to maintain an orderly market.

He said the state of the foreign exchange fund is reported at the end of each month. The current state will be reported at the end of this month.

Olympic Village Fraud Charges Laid

MONTREAL (CP) — Two top officials in the company which built the Olympic Village appeared in court Tuesday to face charges of fraud, extortion and secret commissions laid last week by Quebec Provincial Police.

Joseph Zappia, president of Les Terrasses Zarolega, was charged with six counts of extortion, fraud and receiving kickbacks. Company secretary Gerald Robinson was charged with three counts of receiving kickbacks and fraud.

The main charge against Zappia involves an alleged extortion of $540,2300.

Separate preliminary hearings were set. Zappia will appear Dec. 8 and Robinson on Jan. 18.

Zappia and Robinson, along with five other business partners, were charged last summer with fraud and conspiracy in connection with construction of the Village, which housed athletes during the summer games. Zappia's preliminary hearing on these charges has been set for Dec. 6. The others charged will appear in court Jan. 18.

Cod War Finally Lost by Britain

LONDON (AP) — Another campaign in the cod war between Britain and Iceland ends tonight in defeat for the British.

A six-month interim fishing agreement expires tonight. Owners of 16 British trawlers that were allowed to fish off Iceland indicated that they will leave and no trouble is expected.

The departure of the trawlers is a defeat for British diplomacy and a blow to Britain's deep-sea fishing industry.

Some of the fishermen will join the queues of trawlermen on relief. Others will try their luck in the more distant, less certain grounds of the Barents Sea, north of the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, British housewives find cod expensive and scarce. Once an economy food, it now sells for $1.48 a pound.

For Iceland, a country of 200,000 people whose economy is almost totally dependent on fish, the British withdrawal is a major victory.

Officials in London said the government can do nothing to keep a British trawler out of the fishing zone which Iceland proclaimed for 200 miles beyond its coastline. But they warned that a skipper who violates the 200-mile limit will get no help from the Royal Navy when Iceland's coast guard gunboats go after him.

Future British fishing in Icelandic waters depends on European Common Market negotiations with Iceland for fishing rights for the nine-country European Economic Community. Talks start Dec. 14 in Brussels, Belgium. Similar pacts are to be negotiated with Norway and Greenland.

The Common Market plans to declare a 200-mile fishing limit next year, although Britain is disputing with the other eight countries how close they can fish to its shores. It wants an exclusive 50-mile zone for British fishermen.

Britain and Iceland have been feuding for 18 years over British trawlers fishing for cod and other species in the rich waters off the Icelandic coast. Each extension by Iceland of its exclusive fishing zone has set off a new round of hostilities, with Icelandic gunboats cutting the nets of British trawlers, collisions between the gunboats and British frigates protecting the trawlers, angry charges and countercharges, and a 3½-month break in diplomatic relations early this year.

The third war lasted from November, 1975, when the 200-mile limit was declared, until the six-month agreement was signed June 1. British frigates were involved in 45 collisions with Icelandic gunboats, and the Royal Navy said damage to 15 frigates totalled more than $2 million. The gunboats cut away the fishing gear and catches of 45 trawlers.

$ Fall To Hike Food

Prices for many food commodities should increase and the decline in prices of others should stop in the next few weeks because of the sudden drop in value of the Canadian dollar, British Columbia farm leaders said Tuesday.

Commodities most affected will be chicken meat, pork, fruit and vegetables.

Provincial agriculture ministry spokesmen and farmers attending the annual meeting of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture in Richmond welcomed the six-cent drop in value, saying it will mean a large cutback of many United States food imports which have flooded the Canadian market for the last eight months.

In Victoria, the B.C. branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada said in a brief to Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair Tuesday that higher food markups and lower family incomes are making life onerous for B.C. consumers. The consumers asked Mair to set up a task force of deputy ministers to initiate, co-ordinate and review food policy in B.C. Story on Page 37.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said in Richmond that consumers should not be upset because farmers "have shown by the consumer price index they have been carrying a greater load of the anti-inflation measures."

"They (consumers) should be prepared to support people in their own province and spend their money where they earn it and not sending it to other countries."

A chance to chase Christmas bargains in Port Angeles is offered Victoria shoppers at excursion rates.

Two Port Angles hotels — just 90 minutes from Victoria — are advertising three-day, two-night holiday packages for $33 each, double occupancy, in a promotion sponsored by Downtown Merchants Association.

Shoppers from here can expect to save at least six per cent on food items and substantially more on clothing and durable items.

Jack Rabourn, manager of Aggie's Inn, said the offer is good for any three consecutive days including weekends. His hotel includes dinners on two nights and continental breakfast two mornings in a deluxe room.

The Royal Victorian and Harrington's Town House makes a similar offer, and both hotels provide courtesy transportation from the ferry terminal.

Not long ago the trend was in the opposite direction, when Port Angles residents came to Victoria to do their serious shopping.

"We used to do a lot of shopping in Vancouver and Victoria, but prices have got to be rather out of hand," Rabourn said.

Recently he attended a convention in Vancouver. "I was looking at men's clothing and I was appalled at the prices," he said. Suits and sport coats were $20 to $100 higher than at home.

Americans used to seek British woollens in Victoria, imported in great quantity and variety by both department stores and specialty shops.

But now the same items can be bought for cheaper in even smaller centres like Port Angeles, than in B.C.

Addict Treatment

Health Minister Bob McClelland has returned from studying the methods used in Japan for treatment of heroin addicts. He says he is keeping an open mind about whether changes are needed in the B.C. system. See story on Page 3.

$ RECOVERING

The Canadian dollar recovered slightly today in international trading, reaching 96.57 cents U.S. at noon, compared with a low of 96.49 at closing Tuesday.

A foreign exchange trader in Montreal said trading seemed to be slowing down.

"It's not as hectic as it has been the last few days," the Royal Bank trader said. (MPs quiz dollar decline, see P.49.)

LUMBER COMMUNITIES ALARMED

Layoffs for 12,000

British Columbia's major forest companies will lay off more than 12,000 employees this month.

Of the total, at least 5,800 are loggers, 5,400 are pulp and paper workers, 580 work in sawmills while another 500 are in linerboard and other mills.

In the case of loggers, layoffs are normal over Christmas but some communities are alarmed by what shapes up as a five-week closure.

Hardest hit is Port Alberni where almost 3,000 men will be laid off by MacMillan Bloedel.

The company will lay off 1,473 Port Alberni loggers Friday and will close the pulp mill for two weeks starting Dec. 22, laying off another 1,300 employees.

Another 100 men have been laid off indefinitely at the Port Alberni plywood mill.

One manager said he expects a severe slump in sales in January but traditional Christmas spending will likely be heavy, despite the cutoff of wages for the five-week period.

A spokesman for MacMillan Bloedel said loggers should be back at work in January if weather conditions permit.

Jack Munro, western regional vice president of the International Woodworkers of America, said the companies are not managing their operations effectively and appear not to care about their workers.

He said the companies complain about a lack of productivity, but if employees had increased their productivity, the layoffs probably would have come two months ago.

NDP forest policy critic Bill King said the layoffs demonstrate the need to decentralize the forest industry, as recommended in the Pearse report.

King said large companies regularly lay off loggers during the winter while smaller companies continue to maintain full employment.

The layoffs affect most Vancouver Island communities.

Victoria escapes any immediate layoffs in the city limits but loggers and mill employees in the district are affected.

British Columbia Forest Products will be closing its pulp and paper operations at Crofton for two weeks starting Dec. 24. The company said most of the 1,050 employees would take the times as holidays to avoid losing pay.

In Victoria, BCFP mill manager Jim Warr said the company has no plans to reduce its present staff level of 850 employees.

"Our staff total has been remarkably stable all year and we are hopeful this will continue through the winter."

The only closure in sawmill operations to date is a layoff of two shifts by MacMillan Bloedel at Harmac, near Nanaimo, putting 580 men out of work from Dec. 22 to Jan. 3.

The closure is set to coincide with a shutdown of the Marmac pulp mill putting 850 off the job for the same period.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. said it will be laying off 1,000 loggers and 550 pulp workers for an extended Christmas break.

British Columbia Forest Products is laying off 800 loggers.

Company spokesman said the logging layoff is normal practice at this time of year, although it does not normally last beyond two weeks.

But the pulp and paper

JUDGE FIGHTS PRISONER

SASKATOON (CP) — A judge fought off a 19-year-old prisoner who attacked him waving a knife in court Tuesday.

"I don't know what the man's intentions were, whether he wanted to take me as a hostage or what, but I grabbed the arm with the knife and simply tried to hold him away. I knew help wouldn't be far away," Judge R. N. Conroy said in an interview.

Saskatoon police said the defendant rushed up to the judge and waved a knife in his face threateningly

"The judge grabbed his arm and pushed him away. When the prisoner realized his action wasn't going to get him anywhere he tried to escape from the court," a police spokesman said.

Food War With U.S.?

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada could be waging a war of aggression against the United States within the lifetime of most of the present population, according to Dr. Iben Browning of Albuquerque, New Mexico.

He is convinced changes in climate are coming that will ruin Canada's fragile food growing capability.

When people get short of food and their children are starving they are not interested in compromising," Browning, a physiologists, said in a telephone interview from his home.

"History shows repeated examples of people migrating when food supplies grow short," he added.

In the thirteenth century, he asserted, the Mongols, never more than a million strong, conquered all of Asiatic and European Russia to find food for themselves and their livestock.

The same thing could happen with Canadians.

In the next 50 or 60 years drought and increasing cold will menace this country's food growing region.

And these factors could turn a peaceable nation into a band of agressors seeking land from their southern neighbors.

Browning admits his projected scenario isn't based on hard facts, but on an analysis of history drawn from his study of the world's changing climate.

We may think we can control climate, Browning said, but that is a myth.

"We don't control our environment at all, it controls us. Climate pushes mankind around."

"The whole world is going to be short of food," Browning warned. But the countries that will be among the hardest are those in the northern hemisphere—Canada, Britain, Germany, France.

Browning's gloomy forecasts are based on what he sees as the coming together of three separate climatic cycles. By themselves they can be upsetting.

But, piled one atop the other, they could be catastrophic.

First, is a 179-year cycle of tidal activity that affects the earth's crust. This phenomenon is releasing pent-up energy causing earthquakes and volcanoes.

This means a lot of dust and debris is being stirred up that filters into our atmosphere, blocking out sunlight.

Friday Meeting Could Mean Christmas Postal Strike

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers meets Friday to decide whether to snarl Canada's heavy pre-Christmas mail flow with a new round of walkouts.

CUPW president Joe Davidson scheduled the meeting of top union officials after the collapse of mediation efforts to resolve chronically festering problems stemming from automation changes in the postal system.

(Postal officials in Victoria have advised that the Christmas mail rush has already started and appealed to the public to try to avoid using the post office on Mondays, which are particularly heavy days. See story page 9.)

"The Canadian public will probably know what we intend to do then (Friday) — whether or not we'll hold a national strike, or start rotating strikes or we might not strike at all," Davidson told a news conference today. "It's up to the board of diretors."

"The mediator quit," said Davidson. "So we are back at square one."

He appealed to the public "to put the blame where it really belongs—the employer."

Davidson said the union leaders could not call a national strike without holding a country-wide vote. However, CUPW executives had authority to call rotating strikes without holding such a vote.

Mediator Dr. Noel Hall cancelled further talks between the CUPW and government negotiators late Tuesday after deciding he could not bring the two sides to settlement.

Davidson accused the government of failing to live up to terms of a settlement on the automation issue reached Dec. 2, 1975, which ended a 42-day strike by the postal workers. The CUPW has said changes have been introduced without regard to agreed to procedures in the intervening time.

"It will take till kingdom come to settle the 5,000 grievances we now have before the government," Davidson said.

In a statement, CUPW vice-president Jean-Claude Parrot said "the continuing refusal of employer representatives to accept the requirements of the collective agreement, especially article 29 on technological change, have caused the failure of Dr. Hall's efforts to mediate this dispute.

147 USC Projects Stress Self-Help

Not just help—self help.

That's the emphasis this year in programs sponsored by the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, 147 projects on three continents.

The USC has pioneered countless self-help projects over its 31-year history because it believes implicitly in the principle of people working out their own destiny in their own culturally-oriented ways, says executive director Dr. Lotto Hitschmanova.

Great thinks can come from small investments, she says. In Lesotho, for example, the donation of a building together with egg-grading equipment has enabled local women to establish a grass roots egg marketing organization designed to control the price and distribution of eggs between rural and urban centres.

Then in Botswana a project to grow eucalyptus trees has met with great success and could help cut back timber imports from South Africa.

In other countries, a few tools supplied by the generosity of Canadians through the USC, a piece of industrial equipment or a simple irrigation device have given thousands the means to make a modest livelihood and break out of the cycle of poverty.

The USC is a non-governmental, non-political, non-denominational, non-racial voluntary agency which continues to bring a helping hand to the poor and disadvantaged around the world each year because enough Canadians believe charity can't afford to stay at home.

Last year the people of Greater Victoria contributed $23,920 to the local USC appeal sponsored by the Victoria Times. This year they are being asked to give $30,000 and with the campaign just under way, the total given so far stands about $3,500.

Donations can be mailed in care of the Victoria Times, P.O. Box 300, Victoria, brought to the business office counter at 2621 Douglas St. or will be accepted by any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia. Cheques should be made payable to the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.)

BIRDS BRING DISEASE

A shipment of pet birds which arrived in Victoria earlier this year is suspected of bringing a rare but potentially severe pneumonia-like disease called psittacosis or ornithosis.

Dr. Brian Allen, deputy regional health officer, said today seven or eight people have come down with a desease thought to be the kind sometimes carried by birds.

While it is severe, it is rarely fatal and can be treated in hospital with antibiotics. All local cases are recovering satisfactorily.

The disease has not been positively identified in either the birds or people, he said. Laboratory testing in Vancouver is continuing.

The birds under suspicion are members of the parrot family. But people who have pet budgies, parrots, parakeets or the like should not be alarmed, said Dr. Allen, because it is highly unlikely the disease, even if confirmed, could have spread from the suspected birds.

Dr. Allen said the suspected cases have involved people who handled, distributed, bought or were otherwise associated with a shipment of birds to a local pet store which he declined to identify.

The birds might have the disease or just be carriers of it.

About two dozen birds are being held in quarantine. The threat of the disease led local bird fanciers to cancel a meeting.

Pub Liquor Dispenser 'Snow Job' Charged

A spokesman for the B.C. Hotels Association charged today liquor-dispensing equipment companies have "done a snow job" on some hotels.

Louis Valente, past president of the association, was referring to reports that some hotels have installed the equipment in their beer parlors in anticipation of new liquor regulations.

He said the dispensing companies have been "spreading the word" since October that the new regulations will allow the sale of liquor in pubs.

The long-awaited changes to B.C. liquor laws were expected to be announced this afternoon.

Valente said he was "never more disturbed in his life" than he is about reports that the hotels are installing the new equipment.

"We never, never, never at any time were given any tip that we would be allowed liquor in pubs," he said.

"These guys got sold a bill of goods by the liquor dispensing equipment companies."

He would not name the companies involved but the owner of one of the largest firms today denied the charge.

Rob Norbert, president and owner of R and M. Distributing Ltd. in Vancouver, said there is no way his company is out to push new equipment for beer parlors.

He said there is not one hotel in the province that has installed new automated liquor dispensing equipment just for possible use in its beer parlor.

Some hotels, like the Ingraham in Victoria, have had equipment installed because it saves them money on existing operations, he said, adding it is possible the equipment could be adapted to serve a beer parlor if the liquor laws are changed.

He said many hotels in B.C. are in a precarious financial position and need to be able to sell liquor in the pubs in order to compete with other liquor outlets.

"There is no way we want to do anything to jeopardize the hotel industry," he said.

Norberg explained that people in the hotel industry are concerned, that reports of hotels installing equipment in their pubs might lead the government to shy away from recommended changes in the laws.

He blamed the media for "sloppy reporting" and giving the impression that the new equipment is being installed purely for use in the beer parlors.

He said the equipment companies have heard a lot of rumors about upcoming changes but haven't instigated them to boost sales.

In the case of the Ingraham, he added, the equipment was put in this week primarily to increase the hotel's profit from the sale of liquor in its cabaret.

A spokesman at the Ingraham said the new equipment could cost about $9,000.

Valente said B.C. is the only province in Canada that doesn't allow the sale of liquor in pubs.

He said the B.C. hotels are "hurting" and desperately need to be able to sell liquor in the pubs in order to compete with dining lounges, discos and cocktail lounges.

BUILDER KNOCKS SAANICH COUNCIL

'You Don't Want Affordable Housing'

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich aldermen were scolded Tuesday for being unrealistic about housing needs.

Builder Chris Pike, former chairman of the Victoria Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada's municipal affairs committee, told aldermen they must consider other alternatives to single-family homes or four-storey apartments.

"You don't want affordable housing," Pike told council's housing committee.

He said townhouses, zero lot-line homes, cluster housing and other types of construction are needed.

He faulted Saanich for encouraging "square boxes."

He cited Gordon Head as an example of what can happen with "square boxes."

"Right now it's a lousy looking district. It's terrible," he said. "It's going to give you problems in the future. It's restricted to middle-aged people. We need a cradle to grave set-up."

"There are a lot of alternatives from a planning point of view," assistant municipal planner Tom Jenkinson conceded, "but they must be politically and publicly acceptable."

The key is that it has to be done well. There are lots of alternatives and we have to look at them."

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said designs of "affordable housing" could be controlled through land-use contracts.

Ald. Fred Severson observed, "It's the price of lots that's killing us."

He said Saanich council, alone, should not be responsible for providing affordable housing. The provincial government should assume some responsibility.

"I'm going to stand up and be counted. Why should we always be responsible for housing at the expense of people who put us in? We can only build when we have sewers," he said.

He and Ald. David Paterson said deputy housing minister Larry Bell had promised help in providing services when council and provincial officials held a meeting on housing needs several weeks ago but no positive steps have been taken.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said he had heard from Bell's office.

"But it wasn't a truck of gold, that's for sure," Tremayne said, "Rather, we told them they have to come up with something."

Shipyard Strike Averted

Negotiators are recommending acceptance of a last-minute recommendation from mediator Fred Geddes for settlement of a contract dispute at Burrard Dry Dock in Vancouver and Yarrows in Victoria.

Representatives of 24 shipyard unions met in Victoria Tuesday and voted in favor of the recommendations.

The 800 shipyard workers will vote on the proposals during the rest of the week and the ballots will be counted Monday.

Jim McAvoy, president of the Joint Shipyards Conference of unions, said Tuesday that because of a lot of hard work by Geddes "we have hopefully averted a strike."

The unions had voted earlier this month to reject the companies' final offer and then voted by a 60-per-cent margin for strike action to back their demands.

Final negotiations with the companies broke off Nov. 17 and Geddes was asked to withdraw leaving the unions free to serve 72-hour strike notice.

There hasn't been a strike at the shipyards for 13 years.

The companies' final offer, retroactive to Aug. 15, 1975, was for $1-an-hour increase over 25 months for a journeyman on a base rate of $8.33 an hour.

'No Christmas' Say Residents Of the Alkazar

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The 21 elderly tenants of the Alkazar Mansion on Fairfield Road are slowly coming to grips with eviction orders telling them to be out in two months.

Now, instead of Christmas shopping, they will be trudging around the city looking for a new place to stay, hoping to find somewhere as inexpensive and friendly as the Alkazar.

"There'll be no Christmas here this year," says Amy Cresswell, a 16-year tenant and part-time manager. "They've spoiled it for all of us."

Mrs. Cresswell who refused to give her age ("I'm an elderly woman") said the Alkazar is not like an apartment, but a home.

Even the few new tenants who came in from time to time, she said, were immediately made part of the family.

Now all the elderly tenants are fearful they won't find a place to stay that is affordable, she said.

Rents average $110 to $120 per month.

A previous owner of the building was handed a fire marshal's upgrading order, but the work was not carried out. The new owners—Reeson and Pinch Homes—citing the extensive renovations needed, then applied to the city and was given a demolition permit.

Reeson and Pinch were also granted a shorter eviction notice time — two months instead of three — because of the fire marshal's order.

Mrs. Cresswell said no one in the Alkazar has much money and the eviction notice has caused so much worry that some tenants, including herself, can't eat or sleep.

And some, she says, haven't yet fully understood the eviction notice.

One of the tenants is 87 years old this month and has lived in the Alkazar since 1917 when she was young and working.

"She loves the place. It's her home," Mrs. Cresswell said, "But she doesn't seem to be quite taking it (the eviction notice) in."

She said another old man, about 80, is "almost in tears" at the prospect of having to move.

"The old lady next to me is so confused she hasn't done anything (about finding another apartment)" she said.

Mrs. Cresswell is ill with sciatica and hasn't been able to get out much. But she's hoping she can go searching for another place to live.

"It's heartbreaking," she said. "Something should be done. You should write an article about old people being turned out in the cold."

Mrs. Cresswell fondly remembered an old landlord, Neills Knudsen, who never raised the rent, gave Christmas presents to all his tenants every year, put up a big Christmas tree and would regularly stop in and visit the elderly residents.

But those happy days are gone forever.

Jimmy Took A Walk

Three-year-old Jimmy Ferguson decided Tuesday to take a little walk with his dog through the hills behind Sooke.

Seven hours later, in the pitch black, he was still walking as 50 searchers combed the countryside for him.

They eventually found him at 6:45 p.m. tired, wet and hungry in thick bush four miles from his home at 2125 Harborview Road.

Sooke RCMP said the boy wandered from his home at 11:30 a.m. and his mother reported him missing at 1:10 p.m. after she and neighbors failed to find him.

An RCMP tracking dog was brought down from Nanaimo and by 4:30 p.m. about 50 people including neighbors, police, firemen, youth groups, Emergency Measures Organization members from Saanich and citizen band radio operators—had begun a search over a wide area of the community.

Sooke volunteer firemen Gary Jones and Pat Farquhar located the boy after hearing a faint whimper in bush near the Geater Victoria water board pipeline.

Offer Okay With Firemen

Saanich firemen have agreed to an interim 1976 contract with the municipality provided they are given certain guarantees related to the wage gap with Vancouver firefighters.

The firemen voted at a meeting Tuesday night to accept the contract provided they receive the guarantees in writing.

A letter of intent from the municipality was promised Tuesday and was to include a provision that Saanich firemen are not to drop more than 2.5 per cent — or $33 a month — behind their Vancouver counterparts when their agreement is approved by the federal Anti-Inflation Board.

The letter would also state that if, when Victoria firemen settle their contract, they move up on Vancouver Firefighters, then the Saanich contract will follow suit.

The interim offer from the municipality is for a seven-per-cent wage increase and a one-per-cent increase in fringe benefits retroactive to Jan. 1.

However, Ken Ebbs-Canavan, president of the Saanich local, said today that eight-per-cent total package is expected to go to about nine per cent once the Vancouver contract is settled.

Ebbs-Canavan said a cut back in services begun by the firemen last Friday will end once the union has the letter of intent from Saanich.

The interim agreement will bring a first class fireman's monthly salary up to $1,380 a month from $1,290.

Developer's Approval Claim Denied

A claim that the Capital Regional District approved a 77-unit townhouse development next to Goldstream Park before the project went to a public hearing was denied Tuesday.

The denial came from Langford director Earl Pallister.

The claim was made at the hearing by Ron Scattergood, principal of Glenview Developments, a firm seeking to rezone the land from motel use to residential.

The proposal is being opposed by ratepayer groups, conservation and environmental societies and the federal fisheries department on the grounds effluent from the subdivision will pollute Goldstream river—a valuable salmon-rearing river.

Scattergood told the meeting he presented two choices to the regional district—to build 77 self-owned or 77 rented (motel) units.

"They went along with the townhouses," he said. "They gave the proposal its blessing."

Pallister, who chaired the meeting, took exception to Scattergood's statement.

"The regional board has not approved the proposal," he said. "It has never come up before the board to the advisory planning committee. You may have got the approval of a planner, but not the board."

In answer to a question from Hans Fredericksen, a member of the audience, Scattergood said he submitted the proposal to the regional district seven or eight months ago.

"This whole affair looks to me to be all politics-," replied Fredericksen.

He said he went to the regional district in August and was told by planners there was no such proposal for Goldstream.

Scattergood also told the hearing the Pollution Control Board had approved his septic tank scheme for the housing subdivision.

"I'm surprised they are not here," he said.

But a spokesman for the government department denied today Scattergood had any dealing with the pollution branch or board.

Mary Thyne, of the Concerned Citizens of B.C., submitted a petition signed by 200 nearby residents opposing the project.

"It's not only seepage from septic tanks which will pollute the river," she said: "The pollution from surface drains and runoff from the blacktop will do as much damage."

She recommended monitoring the chemistry of the water.

Jack Henson, developer of a nearby subdivision, said the townhouse proposal will depreciate the homes of people in the neighborhood.

Lloyd Gudewill, of the federal fisheries protection service, and Howard English, a member of the Amalgamated Conservation Society, also urged a river study.

"Sewage from septic tanks, even it is treated, would still contain enough nutrients to speed algae growth and choke thousands of salmon that spawn in Goldstream," English said.

Gus Underwood, spokesman for 1,200 members of five Indian bands in the area, said Indians will lose their fishing rights, established by treaty, if the river becomes polluted.

Scattergood told the meeting townhouses would be more pleasing to the eye and would probably be better looked after than motel units.

"Blackmail", said a member of the audience. "You are attempting to pressure us into accepting the townhouses."

He Swings From Sublime To Gorblimey

High above his Oak Bay guest house, Bill Scott sits surveying the world from his lighthouse-like lookout and tells you he's a crackpot.

But you know he isn't. Well . . . not completely.

"I'm a veteran in stupidity; you're just an amateur," he informs me when we meet. And in one hand I'm clutching a copy of The Lighthouse Philosopher, the book Victoria journalist Ed Gould has written about the adventures of Bill Scott. I've come prepared!

Published by Hancock House and selling in local bookstores for $8.95, it tells how Bill rose from the East End slums of London to a key position with the Chinese Maritime Customs Service as a lighthouse technician on the coast of China for 23 years.

It tells, too, of the ordeals he faced in Second World War Japanese interment camps in Shanghai; of how his family fled to Victoria for safety and how he later followed. And it tells of his somewhat different philosophies that led to his famous soapbox oratories in Beacon Hill Park and Centennial Square and to his countless running battles with the government, City Hall and the legal profession.

But to the average reader, Gould's book is likely to paint the literary picture of "Bill Scott the two-edged sword." There are so many good thoughts. "You're never poor as long as you can laugh" is one of his favorite expressions. But there are so many contradictions that when you finish the last page your mind is likely to be spinning.

Bill Scott . . . many contradictions

Scott is highly critical of Chiang Kai-shek, who he said died one of the richest men in the world, and of the Americans for bleeding China dry. Yet he admits that by bribing officials at every level he managed to get "15 crates of his hard-earned furniture and art works" out of China. He justifies this by saying that when he saw bureaucrats and diplomats using every form of bribery and corruption to get their collections out of the country, he decided to do the same.

Scott plainly has little time for lawyers, money lenders, banks and finance companies. Yet he owns a pawnshop on Johnson Street.

He has long claimed he has been a Communist; yet in the book is quoted as saying "I was born a Christian and I shall die a Christian. And he is a Communist who is so much of a Capitalist that he owns not one but two businesses!

In his defence, Scott points out he "only chiselled peanuts, not coconuts." But where do you draw the line, I wonder?

And so I climb the steep circular stairs to the lookout and then sit sipping Chinese tea amid all the carvings and memories of the past in the cosy den below and I ask Bill about some of these anomalies.

"I'm a Christian because I support the moral ethics of Jesus Christ, and the philosophy in China today is applied Christianity without the creed, dogmas and ceremonies of the church," he explains.

And he decided to take his

Chinese art works with him when he saw the Japanese destroying beautiful things all around him.

Then what, too, of this image of being a crackpot, the image he so carefully nurtured through soapbox orations and political campaigns to the extent that he lost his credibility with Victoria people?

"I've been handicapped since birth by having a mischievous personality," he says with his now-famous grin. "I'm a Pisces. I can go for the sublime to the gorblimey. It's my nature, swinging in opposite directions . . . the positive is the negative."

But Bill Scott is a serious man, too, though not enough Victorians have got to know this side of his nature. Although no longer seen on his soapbox in the park, at 78 he is still actively campaigning and his latest cause is for preschool education between the years of three and six on the lines Mao Tse-tung had so much success with in China.

"It is through the children we must bring change and the first six years of their lives are the crucial ones," says Scott. "A civilization is no better or worse than its teachers and its students."

Then it's back to stupidity for an eloquent finish.

"The only legacy worth leaving to you is the legacy of my stupidity and my generation's stupidities," Bill says with feeling. "The stupidities of producing two world wars, of causing conflicts between capital and labor, and of insanely using our intellectual energy to create pollution and the rapid extinction of our natural resources . . ."

"If we have left you something worthwhile in the arts and literature, cherish them. But throw into te garbage the stupidities of my generation."

Man's World ... Even For Apes!

LONDON — A British court ruled Tuesday that King Kong's territory is an exclusively male preserve, by banning a female rival named Queen Kong.

The court granted an injunction restraining Dexter films from distributing a new movie called Queen Kong pending a full hearing of a copyright dispute.

RKO, makers of the original King Kong movie in 1933, sought the injunction, along with the Dino de Laurentis Corp., licensed by RKO to make a new $20-million movie about the giant gorilla.

Dexter films argued that despite resemblances, copyright was not infringed, maintaining that King Kong was about a male gorilla, Queen Kong about a female.

Scrabble Players Come Out of Closet For the First B.C. Tournament

VANCOUVER — The occasion more closely resembled a cocktail party than a contest of wits and words.

The participants ranged from secretaries and teachers to civil servants and students. They came to enjoy themselves — not to win, they said.

Ninety-two players — the youngest 16, the eldest 77 — gathered at a Vancouver restaurant for British Columbia's first open Scrabble tournament.

It was the first time most of the players had come up against opponents who were not neighbors or friends. One player observed: "The Scrabble players have come out of the closet."

The mood changed as players prepared for the first of three one-hour games. Some scanned the official dictionary, trying to memorize words like quag and zoa. Others reviewed the rules.

"Some of them look like real battle-axes," said Phyllis Westmacott, guardian of the dictionary and judge of which challenged words were acceptable.

"You should see some of the expressions on their faces when they come to look at the dictionary."

One woman lost her nerve.

"I've never played the game before in my life," she game beforRe in my life," she said on her way out. "I didn't know it was a tournament.

"My friends just said come on down for an evening of Scrabble."

The remaining players faced their opponents, eyeing the "triple letter" and "double word" premium squares on the empty boards.

Beside them were egg timers setting a three-minute deadline for each move.

The only sound was the shuffling of wooden tiles inside paper bags as the players shook up the letters.

John Pozer, operator of a games shop and co-sponsor of the tournament along with a local radio station, commented on the score sheets as they came in.

A score of 250 was rated mediocre.

"A good player should get about 400 to 500 points," he said. "For that you need about three seven-letter words."

He said the tournament was the first step toward establishing regular scrabble games in Vancouver.

High scorer for the evening was Susie Darke, 25, whose total score was 1,258 points for the three games. Her highest score for one game was 501.

She won a watch, a $50 gift certificate and, of course, a scrabble set.

The University of B.C. secretary said her strategy depended on small words strategically placed. "Big words are not the answer," she added.

The losers had their reasons for the outcome of the games.

"I got 422 the first game," said Al Ricard, 28. "Then I got hit by five I's the second time and went down to 358. You can't do much with two S's and five I's. You've got to pick up the good ones — X's and Z's."

Writer-broadcaster Chuck Davis, who said he is hooked on the game, finished seventh. He said the third game was the toughest because the arrangement of the words on the board offered few places to make additions.

BIG STEP FOR GINNY

A major step forward in pursuit of a professional theatre career has been taken by 21-year-old Virginia Lace (right), former University of Victoria theatre student and daughter of Major and Mrs. John Lace of Sidney.

Recently she was one of a number of students accepted for a two-year course at the Webber Douglas Academy of Dramatic Art in London, England.

Since receiving her Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from UVic, Virginia worked in Toronto before going to England and finding a job organizing conferences and public relations for the headquarters of the National Operatic and Dramatic Association of Great Britiain, a position that involved considerable travelling around Britain.

She attended Claremont Secondary School here and was a member of Don Kyle's successful Claremont choir. She had roles in UVic Phoenix productions of The Last of the Red Hot Lovers, Broadway and Hot 1 Baltimore and in the UVic-Victoria Theatre Guild Theatre Canada showcase production of Threepenny Opera.

Love in a Patrol Car
No Cop-Out in New York

NEW YORK — A police team who shared a patrol car in Brooklyn for two months liked it so much they've become an off-duty team. Joe Povelaitis and Katherine Bridges disclosed that when reassignment sent Miss Bridges to the Bronx they could not stand the separation. So they went down to city hall and got married.

MOSCOW — Marshal Ivan Yakubovsky, commander-in-chief of the East European Warsaw pact treaty alliance, died Tuesday, Tass news agency reports. Yakubovsky, who was born in 1912, was the Soviet Union's first deputy defence minister. He was twice awarded the title of Hero of the Soviet Union. Tass described him as an outstanding Soviet military figure. Yakubovsky, a member of the Communist party central committee, was a unit commander during the Second World war and became commander-in-chief of Soviet troops in Germany in 1967.

LOS ANGELES — A cocaine possession charge against Louise Lasser, star of the TV comedy-soap opera Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman, was dismissed after she completed a drug education program, court officials said Tuesday. Miss Lasser, 35, was arrested May 12 when she became involved in an argument at a local boutique. While she was being booked on outstanding traffic warrants, police said they discovered a vial of white powder in her purse and the drug charge was added.

LOS ANGELES — Mary Tyler Moore, star of her own CBS television series, has signed an exclusive long-term contract with CBS-TV, says Robert Wussler, head of the network. He said Tuesday that under the agreement, Miss Moore will star in at least two specials next season on CBS and star in a new series on CBS during the 1978-79 season. Miss Moore's current series is in its seventh and final season. The star has said she wants the series ended so she can work on other projects for television.

Four-Laner Given Go-Ahead Despite Protest by Indians

PENTICTON (CP) — Construction will begin immediately on the four-lane Channel Parkway, Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday, over opposition of an Indian band.

Fraser said the project will not go to tender but will be done by highways department crews.

The call for tenders had been delayed after Chief Morris Kruger of the Penticton Indian band informed the department that two pieces of land, owned by individual band members, were on the proposed right of way.

"There is no Indian land involved in the parkway," Fraser said, "and we intend to go ahead with the work, without a contract or tender call, using our own crews."

The minister said the disputed land was, in fact, land turned over to the federal public works department by the federal Indian affairs branch.

Penticton Indian band is not going to stand idly by if B.C. highways (Crews) move in to start the parkway, Chief Kruger said Tuesday.

"We've got a good case, (on parkway lands) and besides, if they want to push the parkway, we can do some pushing on Green Mountain road," he said.

Green Mountain road runs through Penticton Indian reserve. The much-used road leads to ski resorts and to ranchlands west of here.

"They'll have to negotiate with us. We're not going to back off on this one," he added.

Chief Kruger said the order-in-council designating the right-of-way for the Okanagan River flood channel was issued in 1955, some time after the channel was completed.

He said the Indians will challenge the order.

He also said the original Indian reserve boundary followed the Okanagan River which meandered across the flatlands of Penticton. In the late 1940s, a straight flood channel was cut through four miles of the flatlands.

"Some of that land along the river course ended up on the Penticton side and was taken too," said the chief.

"If the highways crews move in to start work on the parkway, they'll meet a lot of angry Indians."

Rivtow Head Denies Charge Malibu Princess Not Safe

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cecil Cosulich, president of Rivtow Straits Ltd., has denied a member of the legislature's charges that new transportation arrangements on British Columbia's central and northern coast are endangering lives.

Don Lockstead (NDP — Mackenzie) demanded that Transport Minister Jack Davis replace the Malibu Princess, which sails between Prince Rupert and Masset on the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Cosulich said Tuesday "there is no way" his company would operate any vessel which is unsafe.

"It's not up to us in any case," he said. "We can't take a boat from the dock unless it has the complete approval of the Ministry of Transport.

"Before the Malibu Princess left here it was brought into our shipyard and minor modifications were made . . .

"I bitterly resent statements like those made by Lockstead. A responsible man should be more careful."

The new shipping services were introduced Nov. 1 after the federal government refused to continue subsidizing Northland Navigation Co. Ltd., which had provided passenger and freight service on the coast.

Besides criticizing the safety of the Malibu Princess, Lockstead also called for an inquiry into the awarding of the new shipping contract to Rivtow.

He said the contract was let without bids and there appeared to be an association between the Liberal party and at least one senior official of Rivtow.

Cosulich, an active member of the Liberal party, denied that his political affiliation had anything to do with his company's take-over of coastal shipping.

"The only reason the government appeared to be kind to us in that respect is because we are the only company in B.C. except for Northland which has a basis to operate such a service," he said.

Meanwhile, Coast Ferries Ltd. of Vancouver said Tuesday it is ending its "joint venture agreement" with Rivtow service to the south coast effective today.

George Garrish, a spokesman for Coast, said the two companies had entered into the agreement 90 days ago in an attempt to provide better service to the area.

He said coast operates two freight vessels serving 100 communities between Howe Sound and Rivers Inlet and also operates a scheduled tug-barge service to Powell River and Texada Island.

Another coast spokesman said the decision to end the agreement was "taken at a time when tension in the marine community is running deep over differences in providing scheduled freight service by the tug barge or self-propelled vessels."

Garrish said his company has been serving the south coast for 20 years and the decision to join Rivtow was made after the federal government rejected Coast's bid last summer for a subsidy during the winter.

Holdups Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Douglas James King, 27, of Vancouver, has been charged in provincial court with six armed bank holdups in which nearly $40,000 was stolen. He has been remanded in custody without plea to Dec. 6.

B.C. Pen Won't Bill Prisoners

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prisoners at the British Columbia Penitentiary in nearby New Westminster won't be given the kind of damage bill assessed prisoners in Millhaven Institute at Kingston, Ont., a penitentiary spokesman said Tuesday.

Prisoners at Millhaven have been charged with $300,000 resulting from their October shashing spree.

Oil Interests Eye B.C. Coal

TORONTO (CP) — Denison Mines Ltd. says that Imperial Oil Ltd. plans to acquire a 16.75 per cent interest in Quintette Coal Ltd., which holds a prospective metallurgical coal property in northeastern British Columbia.

Spokesman for Imperial Oil and Denison, which has a 38.25 per cent interest in Quintette, would not discuss the value of the transaction, pending a final agreement and approval by the respective boards as well as governments.

However, industry analysts estimate the deal would be worth about $30 million.

Denison said that apart from the 16.75 per cent interest that Imperial would acquire, the remaining 45 per cent would be held by two Japanese firms, Mitsui Mining Co. and Tokyo Boeki Ltd.

Denison, which manages the property, is completing exploration work on the 96,000-acre Quintette property, which it estimates to contain about 2.8 billion tons of coal in place.

Greenpeace Plan Pay Suit Battle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bob Hunter, president of the Greenpeace Foundation, said Tuesday the foundation intends to contest the lawsuit claiming unpaid wages of $8,500 by a former employee.

Edwin Haggerty of Victoria, a former engineer on the anti-whaling vessel the James Bay, filed a writ in federal court on Friday claiming the unpaid wages from the owner of the ship, the James Bay Exploration Co. of Seattle and the Greenpeace Foundation.

"Ted Haggerty was hired by the owner (Charles Davis) in an agreement where he paid half the wages and we paid half. We told Ted we couldn't afford him in Hawaii when his agreement with the owner ran out and he said he was turned on by what we were doing and would donate his salary back to Greenpeace. This (court action) is the last thing we expected," Hunter said.

Serving Suggestion

All Safeway Self-Basting Turkeys Come With A

POP-UP TIMER

Calculate the cooking time for turkey just as you always have done. The Pop-Up Timer will help to ensure that you remove the bird from the oven when it is at its tender best. It's set to pop-up when the meat has reached the correct internal temperature . . . yet is still firm and moist.

Your Festive Turkey

Safeway Self-Basting

By a Special Process . . . A Blend of Pure Butter is Introduced Deep into the Flesh of the Turkey . . . As it Cooks . . . It Bastes.
